SIX KILLED AND FIVE HURT WHEN PLANE CRASHES

Pilot of Huge Fokker and Unidentified Woman Among Dead — Accident Occurs Near New Market, N. J.

By the Associated Press.
PLAINFIELD, N. J., Sept. 17.—Six persons were killed today when a plane of the Reynolds Airways Co. crashed near New Market. Five others are in Muhlenberg Hospital, this city, in a serious condition.

The dead include the pilot, Harry Chandler, and an unidentified woman passenger.

The injured identified are Fred Heater, 55 years old; his daughter, Betty, 16; Matthew Lutz and Louis Bellis, all of New Brunswick, N. J.

The plan ewas a huge Fokker.

Rudolph Kanpf, proprietor of Five Acres Restaurant, said he saw the plane fall in an apple orchard adjoining his property.

Kanpf said the motor of the plane stopped and it turned over on one side crumpling one wing beneath it when it dropped.

It was impossible to extricate Chandler's body for a time as it was crushed beneath the plane.

ATLANTIC FLYERS FORCED BACK TO IRELAND BY FOG

Capt. Mac Intosh Gives Up Dublin-New York Ocean Cruise 300 Miles Off Galway Coast.

By the Associated Press.
BALLYBUNNION, Irish Free State, Sept. 17.—Another attempt to span the Atlantic on a non-stop flight from east to west has failed, but without disaster.

The monoplane Princess Xenia, owned by the American tinplate heir, William B. Leeds and named for his Russian wife, came to a safe rest on Beale Strand near the mouth of the Shannon, six miles south of this seaside resort, last night after her pilots, Capt. Robert H. MacIntosh and James C. Fitzmaurice, had fought vainly with violent headwinds and blinding fog over the sea.

Ballybunnion is about 160 miles southwest of Dublin. It is south of the Shannon river on the County Kerry coast and is a favorite seaside resort with a permanent population of several hundred.

MacIntosh and Fitzmaurice were disappointed over the failure of their long-planned effort but, like their plane, were unscathed by the fight against the elements over the ocean and their forced return to land. They were in the air a little less than four and one-half hours.

Good Progress Across Ireland.

Leaving Baldonnel Field at 1:36 o'clock yesterday afternoon they made good progress across Ireland only to encounter a 40-mile headwind soon after passing out to sea over the Galway coast, 50 miles to the north of Ballybunnion.

Then came a dense fog. They continued grimly for a time but, finding it impossible to steer a true compass course, they decided that best judgment dictated a return, and at 4:58 p. m. turned back toward Ireland, emptying one gasoline tank to lessen the chance of a crash in landing.

For an hour or more after regaining the coast they cruised to and fro at an extremely low altitude, peering through the mist and seeking a favorable landing place. Circling about and passing back and forth a number of times along the coast they at length brought their ship down at 6 p. m., on Beale Strand, and made their way to a hotel for a rest.

The flyers estimate they had progressed perhaps 300 miles over the sea before they decided that continuance of the flight under the prevailing conditions would be disastrous. They had hoped to reach New York from Baldonnel Field by way of Newfoundland in 26 hours. The plane carried 720 gallons of fuel for the attempt.

DRY AGENTS HELD FOR KILLING MARYLAND FARMER IN RAID

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 17. — A raid on a Maryland farmhouse led to the killing of Charles B. Gunderlach, 77-year-old farmer, and the arrest of four Federal prohibition agents in connection with his death.

One of the agents, John F. Fisher, is in a hospital at Leonardtown, Md., near the scene of the raid with gunshot wounds. Maryland authorities began an investigation after the shooting and the four agents were arrested on a charge of manslaughter.

The prohibition agents, all from Washington, were charged with having conducted the raid without a search warrant. No still was found on the farm.

According to the agents, they approached the Gunderlack home on foot. The farmer met them at the door with a shotgun and fired without provocation, they said. Fisher was wounded during an exchange of shots, while Gunderlach was killed.

BOXER AND PROMOTER FACE ARREST FOR MANSLAUGHTER

Los Angeles Prosecutor Announces Pair Will Be Tried for Death of Youth After Fight.

By the Associated Press.
LOS ANGELES, Cal., Sept. 17.—The District Attorney's office announced at the conclusion of an inquest into the death of Harold Williams, 17-year-old Los Angeles boxer, that information would be filed today, charging A. W. Deweese, promoter of the Cudahy Athletic Club of Bell, and James Campbell, known in the ring as Jimmy Blake, with mansiaughter as the result of the young boxer's death.

It was in the first round of a bout on a boxing program promoted by Deweese, Wednesday night, that Campbell knocked out young Williams, who was fighting his first professional bout for a purse of $2. Williams died a few hours later. Physicians said his death was due to a broken neck and hemorrhage of the brain.

INFLATES LIFE RAFT IN AIR

Naval Parachute Expert Makes Successful Test.

By the Associated Press.
LAKEHURST, N. J., Sept. 17.—Chief Boatswain's Mate Alva F. Starr, conductor of the parachute school at the Naval Air Station here, succeeded in inflating and launching a rubber life raft in Barnegat Bay while descending 250 feet in a parachute from the dirigible J-3 yesterday.

Several feet above the surface of the water Starr dropped the raft, which is similar to those used by trans-Atlantic flyers. It landed right side up and Starr made a descent nearly in its center. He unlashed the collapsible oars, dragged in his parachute, and rowed to shore. The boat was inflated during the descent with a large steel cartridge containing 1950 pounds of compressed air.

TWO DOG TRACKS IN COUNTY DRAW MILLIONS IN BETS

Wagers on the Hounds at Tony Foley's Ramona Course Averages $30,000 a Night for 88 Nights.

WELLSTON BUSINESS PROBABLY BETTER

Few Need Pay to Get in Because Profit Comes From "Take Out" on "Investments."

Competition between the Wellston and Ramona greyhound racing tracks in St. Louis County has grown so keen that the paid admission gates are getting rusty and the pass gates are working overtime. Virtually anyone can obtain a pass and thus have an opportunity to bet his, or her, dollars on the dogs.

A Post-Dispatch reporter who visited both tracks last night found business booming. There were about 9000 persons at Wellston and 7000 at Ramona. The paid admissions were few, but the dollars they wagered were many—and that is where the profit lies for the tracks.

The Ramona track was having its eighty-eighth night of racing. The Wellston club was in its twelfth night, having been opened when the same interests closed the Madison greyhound track near Collinsville, after running during the spring and summer. Races at both tracks are conducted six nights a week, there being no racing on Sundays, a concession to church and reform elements.

$30,000 a Night in Bets.

At Ramona the attendance and betting nightly have averaged 5000 and $30,000, respectively, according to Tony Foley, one of the owners. In 88 nights, therefore, 440,000 persons have wagered $2,640,000. The track's "takeout" (commission) on wagers handled would be $264,000 at 10 per cent, $528,000 at 20 per cent.

The crowds at Wellston have been somewhat larger, perhaps 7000 a night, and the betting has been in proportion. As an added inducement to get the crowds, automobiles and electric refrigerators are "given away" nightly.

There is no State regulation of the betting, and thus the bettor does not know what commision he is paying. However, it is stated at both tracks that the "takeout" is 10 per cent. Mrs. Owen P. Smith, widow of the man who patented the rabbit used at the Wellston track and numerous other tracks in the United States, Canada and England, has a representative stationed in the mutuel rooms at Wellston with instructions to see that 10 per cent is the limit. Her motive is not altogether philanthropic. As long as the tracks continue in public favor, her patent royalties continue, but if the public is gouged and shuns the tracks, her patents become worthless.

In addition to the "takeout," the two county tracks get "breakage." Fans who "invest" in a dog and win a "refund"—to use the technical terminology—are paid up to the last dime, but not the last cent. The "odds" on a winning dog, for instance, might indicate a profit of $2.69, but the sum paid would be $2.60. If the indicated profit were $2.61 or $2.62 or any other sum between $2.60 and $2.70, the sum paid would still be $2.60.

Tracks Are Prospering.

That the tracks are prospering is evident. Martin Hyland, president of the Wellston Kennel Club Corporation, refuses to discuss its business side for publication. Foley of the Ramona track speaks frankly. He says the Ramona owners have not made as much money as expected, but are content. The Ramona plant will be closed when cold weather comes, and will be improved and enlarged before the spring meeting opens.

The Wellston track will run on indefinitely as the East Side track did until public sentiment made a move to Missouri advisable.

Many family groups attend the races. The women, as a rule, go for the show. They sit in the sands, some with children in arms or beside them, and watch the races for nothing. The men do most of the betting, and take their exercise walking back and forth between where the hounds are weighed, and the tellers' windows where "investments" are "accepted" and "refunds" made—if the dogs finish in the money.

Two More Girls, in Their Own Planes, Preparing for Long Flights Across the Ocean

MISS RUTH ELDER. MISS FRANCES W. GRAYSON.

DESPITE the fate of Miss Mildred Doran, flying to Honolulu, and the Princess Lowenstein-Wertheim, attempting an air journey from England to Canada, another pair of young women is going ahead with plans for extended ocean hops. The Sikorsky amphibian plane, shown above, is owned by Miss Frances W. Grayson and is being tested out at New York. Miss Ruth Elder, who recently landed at a Long Island flying field from Wheeling, W. Va., is planning to fly to Paris as soon as weather permits, George Haldeman going as co-pilot.

HEAT SUFFERER KILLED IN FALL FROM WINDOW

J. H. Simon, 56, Had Arisen From Bed Apparently for Breath of Air.

Joseph H. Simon, 56 years old, a retired carpenter, died at about 5:15 o'clock this morning, a few minutes after falling or jumping out of a second floor front window of his home at 4410A Louisiana avenue. Simon, who was an invalid, had found difficulty in breathing because of the excessive heat.

He got out of his bed, walked to the window, and pulled up the screen. Falling or jumping to the stone steps below, he died about five minutes later. Members of his family say they believe he put his head out of the window so he might get more air, and fell because a gangrene condition in his foot had weakened it so it would not support him.

Two Deaths Attributed to the Heat; Police Prison Guard Overcome.

Two deaths yesterday were attributed to the heat wave. Traffic Officer Charles Bridwell, who formerly directed traffic at Grand and Lawton boulevards, complained of a dizzy spell about 5 p. m. and died at his home shortly after a Police Department physician arrived.

Bridwell had not worked since suffering slight injuries July 26 in a traffic accident which left him subject to dizzy spells. He had been a policeman since September, 1921; he was 39 years old and lived at 2243 Gasconade street.

Michael Raumschuh, 45, of 4618 Cecil place, was taken to City Hospital from his home suffering from heat exhaustion and died shortly before 5 p. m. He had been ill an hour.

Patrick Harrington, 62, a prison guard at Soulard Street Station, was overcome by heat while at work early today and taken to City Hospital. He lives at 5058 Alcott avenue.

ALTOONA, Pa., Sept. 17.—Lieut. Valentine Gephart of Seattle, Wash., and Pilot Fred Parker of Anderson, Ind., escaped serious injury yesterday when the engine of their monoplane, the City of Olympia, stalled at a height of 2000 feet near Grampian.

The plane was entered in the Spokane air Derby.

Lieut. Gephart leaped from the plane, but Parker brought it down in a hayfield. The landing gear was broken. Lieut. Gephart fell in a clump of trees and suffered minor bruises.

The City of Olympia was entry No. 31 in the air race and was en route to New York, having flown from Seattle. The plane stopped at Cleveland and was fueled there.

LEGION CHIEFS HONOR WAR DEAD IN PARIS

Gen. Pershing and Commander Savage Pay Tribute to 1500 at Cemetery Ceremony.

By the Associated Press.
PARIS, Sept. 17.—On the slopes of Mount Valerien overlooking all Paris Gen. John J. Pershing and National Commander Howard P. Savage today paid the tribute of the American Legion to the 1500 American soldiers buried there.

Pershing, Savage and Marshal Foch made the only addresses, with French military and civil leaders present. The ceremonies were presided over by Sheldon Whitehouse, American Charge d'Affaires, and those attending included Gen. W. W. Harts, military attache; Gen. Milton Foreman, Gens. Debeny and Gouraud, Col. T. Bentley Mott, Prefect Bowju of the Seine Department, and Capt. l'Hospital, aid to Marshal Foch.

Pershing noted the fact that the first act of the official Legion delegation had been to pay tribute to the dead French comrades at the Arc de Triomphe after their arrival yesterday and then to their own dead comrades in Suresnes Cemetery this morning.

Marshal Foch, in a brief address, crowded into a few words the real feeling of France toward the Legion and the comrades in arms resting in the soil of France.

The ceremonies were opened with an invocation by National Chaplain Wolfe.

Chaplain Dubell, former chaplain in the 114th Infantry, pronounced the benediction and Bugler Bove of the Paris Post of the American Legion, high on the hillside above the cemetery, sounded taps.

Certain radical bodies in France have decided to direct their supporters to work next Monday—the day on which most everyone else is going to take a holiday in honor of the American Legion.

With the arrival of the leaders of the Legion, the communists increased their propaganda, and today all the city except the center is covered with red posters pasted up in the night.

"Assassins!" is splashed across the top, and "Usurers!" below, and the text reads:

"The American Legion, enemy of the workers. They promised to suppress the workers who protested in America against the Sacco-Vanzetti executions. Don't think these Legionnaires are war veterans. They are nothing but Fascists, who never saw the front and come to France to bleed you for debts."

National Holiday Proclaimed in Tunis for Legion Convention.

TUNIS, Sept. 17.—Sidi Mohammed, Bey of Tunis, has issued a decree declaring Sept. 19 a holiday in honor of the American Legion. Tunis is a colonial possession of France, where the nineteenth, the day of the opening of the American Legion convention, also has been declared a national holiday.

$1031 PAYROLL TAKEN IN HOLDUP ON STREET

A $1031 payroll of the Laclede Brass Works, 307-15 Cedar street, was stolen in a street holdup near the plant today.

William Modra, president of the firm, had obtained the money at the Franklin Bank and at 10:30 o'clock was returning to his office in an automobile driven by a friend, Sigmund Stern, 722 Kingsland avenue, University City.

On Third street, between Plum and Cedar streets, their path was blocked by a Studebaker car which was pulled out from the curb where it had been parked with three men in it. While one man remained at the wheel, two stepped out and covered Modra and Stern with revolvers.

"Gimme that money," demanded one of the robbers, and Stern surrendered the payroll, contained in two envelopes. The other armed man locked the ignition on Stern's automobile and took the key, after which both robbers joined the third man in the Studebaker and they drove south to Cedar and then east, tossing out Stern's key as they turned the corner.

This was the seventh payroll robbery reported this year, the total loot being $6278.70, as compared with 18 payroll robberies in which $20,461 was taken last year.

Two Men Get $561 in Holdup in Grocery Store.

Two men, carrying revolvers and wearing blue handkerchiefs as masks, held up four men, including a collector, in a Kroger store at 3103 North Jefferson avenue at 10 a. m. today and escaped with $561.

Joseph Horack, proprietor of a store at 3112 North Jefferson avenue, fired three shots in the air as he saw the masked and armed men enter the Kroger store, but they had done the job and departed when police arrived.

They took $450 from the collector, Hobart A. Schlanker of 5364 Vernon avenue, $105 from the two cash registers and $6 from the collector's personal bill-fold. Running through the rear door and across the yard, they leaped into a Dodge touring car and drove west on Sullivan avenue. George Moeller of Brentwood followed in his machine until he lost sight of the touring car at Sullivan and Spring avenues.

M'ADOO SAYS HE WILL NOT BE CANDIDATE NEXT YEAR

Writes to Editor He Prefers to Stand Aside and Clear the Field for Development of New Leader.

HIS CHIEF CONCERN IS FOR THE PARTY

Recalls Deadlock in 1924 Convention and Hopes There Will Not Be Repetition in 1928.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—William G. McAdoo has informed his friends he will not be a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1928.

His decision has been communicated to George F. Milton, publisher of the Chattanooga, Tenn., News, in a letter sent in response to a request from Milton that McAdoo announce his candidacy.

The letter, together with the one from Milton to which it was a reply, was made public today at McAdoo's law offices here.

Declaring that his "chief concern" was the "supremacy of Democratic principles and progressive policies," McAdoo said that "perhaps I can do more to advance these objects as a private citizen than as a candidate for the presidency."

Prefers to Stand Aside.

"I prefer to stand aside," he added, "in order that the field may be left clear, so far as I can clear it, for the development of a leadership that can more effectively gain these ends.

"I shall not, therefore, be a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1928."

In his letter McAdoo recalled the Madison Square Garden convention of three years ago, at which, on 91 ballots, he led the field of candidates, declaring that "if the Democratic situation should again develop in such a way as to cause a repetition of the inconclusive and disastrous fight in the New York convention of 1924, it would be calomitous and the party would be reduced again to impotence in a presidential contest."

Text of Letter.

The text of McAdoo's letter, under date of September 15, follows:

My Dear Milton:—

I have read with care your letter of Sept. 8th. I think you are right in saying that the time has arrived when, in the interest of the progressive element of the Democratic party, with which I have always been identified, and in order that my friends throughout the country may be guided accordingly, I should indicate my attitude toward the forthcoming campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination.

While most of my life has been devoted to the practice of law and to some important business activities, as for instance, the construction of the Hudson tunnels, nevertheless, because of my profound attachment to Democratic principles, I have maintained a constant interest in public affairs. It was for this reason that I fought with all my power for the nomination of Woodrow Wilson in the Baltimore convention of 1912. After his election, he honored me with an invitation to membership in his cabinet as Secretary of the Treasury.

My enthusiasm for the principles of progressive Democracy which that great statesman and leader represented, induced me to accept that office. For almost six years as Secretary of the Treasury and for one year as director-general of all the railroads of the United States during the World War, I devoted myself without stint or limit to the service of the country. After the signing of the Armistice, I was obliged to resign these offices because an absolute rest, free of all responsibilities, was imperative.

In 1920 a demand, which appeared to be widespread, arose for my nomination for the Presidency by the Democratic party but I refused to become a candidate, although many of my unselfish supporters did me the very great honor of trying to draft me on that occasion.

In 1924 I entered the campaign because it was urged upon me

PROMOTER ADMITS SELLING SAME LOT TO DIFFERENT MEN

C. J. Gonterman, on Trial at Belleville, Says, However, Deals Were Merely Way of Getting Credit.

POSTAL INSPECTOR FOLLOWING CASE

Announces He Will Have Evidence of Mail Fraud Presented to U. S. Grand Jury in St. Louis.

His unruffled affability gone, Courtney J. Gonterman, high-powered salesman and real estate promoter, on trial charged with real estate frauds resulting in estimated losses of $800,000, left the stand in Circuit Court at Belleville yesterday plainly worried.

The change in him was caused more by the heat of cross-examination than that of the sweltering courtroom. He admitted that he had sold the same lots in his subdivision, Bellemoor Place, near Granite City to different persons, but he still insisted, despite contracts describing the transactions as sales, that they were merely means of obtaining credit. He either did not deny, evaded, or refused to answer questions about selling lots to which he had no title at the time of sale.

Postoffice Inspector Wasson, taking notes, said that through United States District Attorney Breuer, he would present evidence to the Federal grand jury in St. Louis in November concerning alleged use of the mails to defraud on the part of Gonterman.

Then there were about 30 farmers from Madison, St. Clair, Monroe and Calhoun counties, whom Gonterman describes as his "co-operators" and whom investigators call his "suckers," who moodily stared at him throughout his testimony. If he is tried on any of the remaining 31 indictments in St. Clair and Monroe counties, they will be witnesses against him.

"Investors" Count Their Losses."

The discussion of these men during court recesses strikes more to the heart of the matter than the tedious technicalities of the actual trial. "I was going to send my boy to school," one said, in speaking of his lost money. "That auto I was going to get would sure be fine in this hot weather," another tells a fellow victim. He, too, is speaking of his lost savings, and adds, "My wife can't stand the heat."

Of the "investors," Fred Breitschaft of Millstadt, is the complaining witness in this case, in which Gonterman is specifically charged with taking $127.50 by a confidence game. When Gonterman testified that instead of being the cause of Breitschaft losing $8000 he had made $1020 for him, Breitschaft held his sides in simulation of silent mirth.

Gonterman admitted selling lots 13, 14 and 15 of block 9 in his subdivision to more than one person. In his direct testimony he said that this was just an "accident."

He was asked if he did not sell certain lots to Breitschaft when he had not yet acquired title to them and made no reply. He was also asked if he did not offer Breitschaft certain deeds to quiet Breitschaft after the latter had suffered losses, when he, Gonterman, did not have title to the lots for which the deeds were made out. Again he made no answer.

Took Notes for $750.

Gonterman, as has been told, persuaded his clients to buy lots at $750 each. Instead of putting up cash they put up personal notes for the amount with the promise that they were to get a profit of $127.50 or, as an alternative, a deed to such lots as they had bought.

The State charges Gonterman then persuaded his clients to put the $127.50 in the Mid-Continent Finance Co., of which he was president, now in receivership. In addition he persuaded the farmers to buy stock in the finance company through giving additional promissory notes. Then he discounted the notes to various Illinois banks and St. Louis finance companies who now are suing the farmers for payment. And the farmers have only some worthless stock.

Gonterman, 35 years old, living at the Forest Park Hotel, contends he sold no lots but merely used the names of his clients, through their notes, as a method of obtaining credit. He says he gave them a contract making the transaction appear as a sale merely to avoid the possibility of his clients being charged with usury when they collected $127.50 from a six-month note. As for the investment in the Mid-Continent company, he says they made them of their own volition and that the failure is no fault of his.

Gonterman took exception to the estimate of $800,000 made by investigators as the loss involved. He says that it is $85,000. However, Postoffice Inspectors, the State's Attorneys of two counties, and others less interested than Gonterman, place it at $800,000. Circuit Judge Landwehr in St. Louis, in appointing a receiver for the Mid-Continent company, said that the loss ran into "hundreds of thousands of dollars" and one of Gonterman's own counsel estimated it at $600,000.

The case went to the jury this afternoon with instructions to return a sealed verdict, which will be opened in court Monday.

CANADIAN BEER SEIZED IN 2 ST. LOUIS STORES

Prohibition Agents Accompany Express Driver in Delivery of 25 Cases.

Twenty-five cases of Canadian beer, shipped into St. Louis from Detroit, were seized and six men arrested at two Franklin avenue stores where they were delivered yesterday, after prohibition agents had followed the shipments from an express office. In each instance, executives of the stores where delivery was made, denied knowledge of the beer.

The deliveries were made to the Globe Clothing Co., at Eighth street and Franklin avenue, and theSigoloff Bros. Hardware Co., at 1206 Franklin.

James Dillon, Deputy Prohibition Administrator for the St. Louis district, said he received information several days ago that the beer was being shipped to St. Louis. An agent was placed at the express office to watch and, when the beer arrived yesterday, Dillon went to the express company and accompanied the driver on the delivery trip.

Cashier Receipted One Case.

"We delivered one case at the Globe Clothing Co., which was receipted for by a girl cashier," Dillon said. "There was no payment of money for the express charges, the firm having an account with the express company.

"At Sigoloff's hardware store, I sat on the wagon in front of the store, but could see inside and saw Morris Cohen, the manager, go to use the telephone. He returned and gave the driver $10.03, the express charges, after the case had been receipted for. Three of our men who remained where they could watch the shipment at the clothing store, saw one of three men open the case and pull out a bottle of beer, which he examined. He expressed no surprise, the men said."

"I was on the way to lunch yesterday, when some one called my attention to the fact that we had received an express shipment from Detroit," Frank Paul, vice president and secretary of the Globe firm and one of those arrested, said today.

"It is rather unusual for us to get any kind of a shipment from that city, and I did not think the shipment was meant for us, although it bore the name of our store.

Refused to Accept Delivery.

"The cases were very heavy, I noted, whereas a shipment of clothing would not weigh so much. After looking at the shipment, I told the express driver I did not believe it was for us and would not accept it. The reason I did this was because the express charges were $22. The driver then said to keep the packages and open them at our convenience, and if they were not ours, we could notify them. The driver is going to make affidavit to this.

"After an employe had opened one of the packages, he shouted out that it was beer and several others gathered around him. At this point, several prohibition agents came in and arrested them and when I returned from lunch they told me not to leave the place and I was arrested also."

Jacob Sigoloff, proprietor of the hardware store, said no one there had knowledge of such a shipment having been made. The fact that the cases containing the beer bore the name of a hardware company as the shipper, convinced Sigoloff the shipment might be for another firm, with which he is connected, which frequently consigns goods to the Franklin avenue store. "I cannot imagine why the beer was delivered to us, except that the persons for whom it was really intended, may have planned to call for it after they had learned we had received it," Sigoloff said.

ILLINOIS LABORITE CHARGES LOBBYING BY 3 LEGISLATORS

President Walker of State Federation Names Michael Igoe, John Devine and Lee O'Neill Browne.

Three lawyer members of the Illinois General Assembly were were charged with acting as lobbyists as well as legislators in the last legislature, in an address by President John H. Walker of the Illinois Federation of Labor, during yesterday's session of the organization's annual convention.

Those named by Walker are Michael Igoe, John Devine and Lee O'Neill Browne.

"Such a condition should not be tolerated," declared Walker in speaking in favor of a resolution for a one-day's-rest-in-seven law for actors, which he said a legislator, retained by the theatrical interests of Chicago, had voted against. This was a flagrant case, Walker said. He declared the acceptance of private fees by legislators was an increasing practice, vicious and subversive of good government.

"Here we have officers of the State," he continued, "using their public office to further the interests of the private concerns by which they are retained as lawyers." He declared it time to look for legislators in some class other than lawyers.

A resolution for abolition of the death penalty was debated by the convention. Walker said he favored the resolution in spirit, but looked askance as its source. He said it was a communist measure, and declared it queer because communists surely believe in the death penalty, inasmuch as they have executed in Russia more than a millions persons guilty of no crime at all.

The "yellow dog contract," by which employes of some firms are requested to sign contracts with their employer agreeing not to join any labor organization, is one of organized labor's most serious problems at this time, speakers said. Discussion of this form of contract came up during an address in which it was said:

"Slavery is not a thing of the past. The 'yellow dog contract' has no other issue than human freedom."

The Federation unanimously adopted a resolution indorsing a proposal for a 1929 sesqui centennial commemoration of the conquest of the Northwest Territory b. George Rogers Clark.

Censorship of the drama was opposed in a resolution unanimously adopted, and in another resolution the Federation opposed the effort of moving picture interests to stifle dramatic tent shows. Delegate Dare of the Actors' Equity Association told the convention that the spoken drama never reached some parts of Illinois except in tents, and in some places the tax against them has put as high as $300 a night.

THREE TESTIFY IN MURDER TRIAL OF MRS. SWEETIN

Neighbor Says He Heard Her Urge Husband to Take Soup Shortly Before His Death.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., Sept. 17.—Chin tilted forward in a determined set, her eyes studiously fixed on the witness or the jury, Mrs. Elsie Sweetin today was attentively following her second trial for the poison murder of her husband, Wilford, Ina coal miner. The miner's widow, accused of entering into a murder conspiracy with her unfrocked Methodist pastor, Lawrence M. Hight, is in the thick of her second fight for freedom, with a dogged desperation hardened by nearly three years in prison. At her first trial Mrs. Sweetin had been sentenced to 35 years.

"Send her to death or send her back to her family," the defense has challenged the jury of farmers in its latest gamble with the law.

Surrounded by this family, three sons who cling to their mother with devotion, Mrs. Sweetin bent her hand in conference with her lawyers this morning when the parade of witnesses telling the story familiar to the countryside was resumed.

Second Trial Progressing Fast.

The second trial is gaining speed on the prolonged first hearing, apparently to the satisfaction of the defendant. Heat or no heat, Judge Pearce is determined to get it over with as soon as possible. He set today's session ahead to start at the unusual legal hour of 8 o'clock, but indicated he would permit a noon adjournment to allow States Attorney Allen to attend a conference of States Attorneys in progress here today.

The medical testimony, interrupted by adjournment late yesterday, was taken up again today with the testimony of various physicians who attended Wilford Sweetin in his last illness and with the testimony of Dr. William D. McNally of Chicago, Coroner's chemist who analyzed Sweetin's stomach three years ago and reported finding sufficient arsenic to cause his death.

The defense is set on proving Mrs. Sweetin had nothing to do with this arsenic being in her husband's stomach.

Outline of Defense.

"We are not going to say that Hight didn't poison Wilford Sweetin," said Smith in his opening statement to the jury yesterday, "but we are going to prove that Elsie Sweetin has always aided the authorities in their investigation of her husband's death.

Whether Hight, who is serving his life sentence in the State Prison at Menard, will assume the burden the defense is shifting to his shoulders remains to be seen when he is brought here next week to testify for the State. Six months after he went to one prison, while Mrs. Sweetin went to another, the former minister wrote a poem indicating he still loved the then comely widow who attended his church in the little town of Ina.

Although Mrs. Swetin maintains he forced her to confess after her arrest by fears of mob violence, there is a belief he may aid her in the second trial. Hight gave up the fight long ago.

The State started to weave its net of evidence late yesterday with the testimony of Lon Gossman, a neighbor and old friend of Wilford Sweetin. Gossman was with Sweetin at his bedside during his last days and gave an account of his death. He testified Mrs. Sweetin gave her husband a cup of soup while he was desperately ill and urged him to drink it.

The State charges the soup contained arsenic, and that it was one of three occasions on which she gave poison to her husband. Gossman also related "Preacher Hight hung around the Sweetin cottage" the night of Sweetin's death, July 18, 1924, and remarked that Wilford "can't last long now."

Two physicians who attended Sweetin, Dr. A. D. Harper of Sesser, and Dr. John Clinton of Whittington, the family physician, testified they first diagnosed the cause of his death as ptomaine poisoning.

Her Confession an Issue.

The State lost its first skirmish in the coming fight over the introduction of Mrs. Sweetin's confessions. The State has four confessions it is ready to put before the jury if Judge Pearce will admit them. The Court deferrred the issue yesterday afternoon but State's Attorney Allen was prevented from mentioning the confessions in his opening statemnt.

The opening statement of the prosecution was interrupted repeatedly by objections from the defense which insisted that no action or statement of Hight could be shown, unless Mrs. Sweetin was present, but Judge Peace rulde that since the indictment charged Mrs. Swetin and the pastor had entered into a conspiracy to kill Wilford Sweetin, any acts of either toward carrying out this conspiracy might be shown.

This ruling was considered a victory for the State as it opens the way for much testimony concerning statements and actions of Hight that would have been barred had the contention of the defense been sustained.

SAYS INDIANAPOLIS MAYOR OFFERED JOB FOR $3000

By the Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 17.—State witnesses in the trial of Mayor John L. Duvall of Indianapolis on a charge of violating the corrupt practices act, yesterday testified that the Mayor offered to sell the city market mastership for $3000, promised another man an automobile for his support and told officials of the Ku Klux Klan he would let that organization dictate 85 per cent of his appointments if his campaign was successful in 1925.

Introduction of the testimony followed a ruling by Judge C. C. Shirley that the prosecution might put witnesses on the stand to prove other similar agreements by Duvall which would show intent in the present case.

Virtually every question put the witnesses on direct examination brought objection from defense attorneys, who moved to have all the testimony excluded on the ground that it did not apply to the charge in the affidavit on which Duvall is being tried. They won their point in several instances.

Duvall is charged with having promised to let William H. Armitage, local politician, select men for three city positions in return for $10,000 and support in the 1925 election.

Says Pledge Was Made to K. K. K.

Dr. George S. Henninger, a Methodist Episcopal minister, testified today that Duvall took an oath that he would "not receive instructions or dictation from any other political group in Marion County other than the Ku Klux Klan."

The testimony was admitted over strenuous objection by defense counsel.

An alleged incident where Duvall stood before a meeting of 1500 klansmen and, raising his hand, said he would give members of that organization a great percentage of the patronage, was related by Dr. Henninger yesterday. Dr. Henninger said he quit the klan about 18 months ago.

Frank Sipe of Indianapolis, testified Duvall had offered him the city market mastership for $3000 but that another man was appointed. Sipe, who had worked for Duvall's election, said he asked the Mayor why he was not appointed.

"He said '$3000—Lay it down and I'll make a change,'" Sipe testified the Mayor said to him.

Promised Auto, Witness Says.

Harvey W. Bedford, a former Indianapolis policeman and who recently was doing Ku Klux Klan organization work in Missouri, said Duvall had promised him "the finest automobile money can buy" in return for his help in bringing about a connection with George V. Coffin, Republican political leader of Marion County.

Oscar Paul Bridges related a story of an alleged meeting Duvall had with members of Marion County klan No. 3.

"Duvall was asked what he would do if the boys saw fit to support him for Mayor and he said he would make 85 per cent of his appointments with the approval of the klan," Bridges testified.

PARENTS OF BOY ACCUSED OF MURDER ARE ARRESTED

Charged With "Conspiring to Obstruct Justice" as 14-Year-Old Son Evades Search.

By the Associated Press.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia., Sept. 17.—The William C. Messners, parents of 14-year-old Lyle Messner, were arrested yesterday while funeral services were held for the six-year-old girl whose bruised body was found in the sub-basement of a vacant house Tuesday night.

"Conspiring to obstruct justice," is the charge on which the parents were held in jail, while their son continued to evade the search for him which has extended to several States. A murder warrant has been sworn out against him.

The Messners were questioned for several hours last night by County Attorney Barnes, who did not, however, indicate the result of the conference.

Robbers Lock Two Women In Tomb, Kill Policeman

Officer Opens Mausoleum Door, Then Runs After Two Holdup Men, One of Whom Shoots Him.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Two women, released from a mausoleum Beth-El-Hoem Cemetery, in which they had been locked yesterday by two holdup men, saw the robbers shoot and fatally wound the policeman who had rescued them.

Henry Meyers, the patrolman, before he died, identified Benjamin Rader, 24 years old, as one of the robbers. Rader was arrested near the cemetery. Police say he has been convicted twice of burglary and once for carrying a concealed weapon. He was at liberty on parole.

Meyers was riding with his wife in an automobile when he heard the women screaming in the cemetery. He ran to their aid and released them from the vault. He then pursued and arrested two men he saw running through the cemetery. When he returned to the women with his prisoners, one of the prisoners drew a pistol and fired five times before Meyers had time to draw his own revolver.

Rader was held without bail. Police are searching for his companion.

The two women, Mrs. Frances Lewis and Mrs. Florence Novack, residents of Manhattan, were praying in the tomb in the cemetery when the holdup men entered.

"No noise, ladies," the robbers commanded as they took $2057 in cash and jewelry from the two women. "You want to keep quiet for 10 minutes or you'll be where your husbands are."

McADOO SAYS HE WILL NOT BE CANDIDATE NEXT YEAR

that the Progressive element of the party relied upon me for leadership. You know that campaign was rendered abortive by the unfortunate injection, against my opposition, of the false religious issue into the Democratic National convention.

I have indulged in this brief epitome to emphasize the fact that my life has been a very intensive one and to express the hope that I am entitled to a respite. Do you not think I have earned at least an "honorable discharge?"

If the Democratic situation should again develop in such a way as to cause a repetition of the inconclusive and disastrous fight in the New York convention of 1924, it would be calamitous and the party would be reduced again to impotence in a Presidential contest. True Democratic principles and progressive Democratic policies, which you and I and our friends believe to be essential to the public welfare and which we have consistently championed, would be submerged in another disaster. Everything possible should be done to prevent the 1928 convention from degenerating into a mere struggle of individuals for personal preferment at the expense of principles and policies of fundamental importance to party character and to the welfare of the nation. Principles and policies must come first. Personal ambitions, however legitimate, and every selfish purpose should be subordinated to them.

To Fight for Democratic Principles

My chief concern is the supremacy of Democratic principles and progressive policies for these mean the preservation, unimpaired, of the Constitution of the United States; the suppression of nullification and the enforcement of law, without which stable government is impossible and without which the blessings of liberty will disappear; justice to agriculture, without which the farmers cannot get their rightful share of national prosperity; and social and economic justice for all classes, without which human opportunity cannot be widened.

Perhaps I can do more to advance these objects as a private citizen than as a candidate for the presidency. I prefer to stand aside in order that the field may be left clear, so far as I can clear it, for the development of a leadership that can more effectively gain these ends.

I shall not, therfore, be a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1928.

But the struggle for the preservation of the Constitution in its integrity, for the defeat of nullification, for obedience to law and for the stern repression of crime, for incorruptible government, for impartial justice, social and economic, for orderly progress and for wider human opportunities, must be carried on and every earnest patriot must see that it is carried on. In an effort to achieve these things, I shall, as a private citizen, be glad to co-operate with all those who deem them essential to the public welfare.

I am deeply grateful to you, my dear Milton, and to the thousands of unselfish and patriotic men and women throughout the country who have fought with me for these principles. Their unswerving support and friendship have given me constant inspiration and a profounder satisfaction than any honors that could be gained in public life.

With warm regard, I am, as always,

Cordially yours,

(Signed) WILLIAM G. McADOO.

Milton in his letter had told McAdoo that the Progressive Democrats of the country were looking for leadership, and that a survey of the nation had convinced him that "the principles and progressive policies you advocated in 1924 have grown stronger and that your strength is greater."

[F]innish Delegation Withdraws Resolution for Appointment of Commission on Alcoholism.

[F]RENCHMAN MAKES [P]LEA FOR TOLERANCE

[A]lso Declares That Geneva Organization Should Not Try to Interfere With Individual Freedom.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Sept. 17.—The antialcohol forces have lost the first round of their fight to have the League of Nations enter the war against excessive drinking of spirituous liquor.

After meeting the opposition of delegates from the wine and whisky producing countries, the Finnish delegation to the league announced that in view of the complexity of the problem they would present a modified resolution.

The original resolution proposed ... active investigation by the league into alcoholism and the appointment of a permanent committee on the subject.

Any antialcohol movement by the league might be considered a disguised attempt to enforce prohibition on various countries, it was argued before the Humanitarian committee of the assembly last night. Louis Loucheur of France insisted that the league should not make itself ridiculous by seeking to interfere with the freedom of individuals. He said that he respected persons who drink water and asked that the same tolerance be extended to those who drink wine.

Although there is much smuggling of liquor between the United States and Canada, this has not compromised the peaceful relations of the two countries, Philippe Roy of Canada said. He opposed the Finnish proposal if it included wine "which is nourishing and not poison." He declared "It is for each country to regulate the use, not of alcohol, but of bad alcohol."

Stresemann Urges Prompt Evacuation of Rhineland.

Special Cable to Post-Dispatch and New York World.

GENEVA, Sept. 17.—Germany trusts to the good will and sincerity of the Locarno signatories to evacuate the Rhineland, immediately, but will decide after the present League of Nations meeting whether to bring the question before the League Council in December, Foreign Minister Stresemann told the press yesterday.

Germany has not abandoned confidence in amicable settlement of the occupation question, but until foreign troops are removed opposition to the League will continue, in the Reich, Stresemann said. He promised that if allied troops are withdrawn from German soil there would not be a single anti-Leaguer in the country.

Reviewing the progress of the present assembly the German Foreign Minister was enthusiastic. He pointed out that events of the last fortnight have proved that no group of big powers can dominate the League.

He regretted the passing of Foreign Ministers Vandervelde of Belgium and Benes of Czecho-Slovakia from the council, for he believes more attention should be paid to personalities than to the countries elected to the Council.

The main issue before the League, he believes, is disarmament, and of that he said:

"Germany needs security more than any other power, but is the most disarmed. We will co-operate actively with the League's efforts in this direction, but desire concrete, tangible evidence of progress."

Arbitration is regarded as a vital approach to security, but the German thesis is that actual reduction of armaments and elimination of competition would establish security even more effectively.

Germany and Arbitration.

Dr. Stresemann said that it was too much to expect that the German people would all have the same views, but warned his hearers against the danger of trying to interpret Germany from opinions expressed by scattered groups of Germans including what he called "the group of irresponsibles who still rant of hate and revenge, asserting that they do not all represent the sound convictions of the German people."

Referring to Germany's decision to sign the compulsory arbitration clause of the world court of justice, Dr. Stresemann expressed the hope that other big nations would follow suit and that France would not insist upon the reservation which she had hitherto attached to her signature of this clause.

Arbitration, Dr. Stresemann held was the great hope of the future and Germany, he said, was ready to accept both the arbitration and security idea embodied in the resolution presented by M. Paul-Boncour of France.

This resolution, intended to promote arbitration agreements for all disputes between nations, urged the creation of a preparatory dis-

COSGRAVE PARTY LEADING IN IRISH DAIL ELECTION

Farmer and Labor Parties Suffer Losses — James Larkin Elected—Disorder Marks Balloting.

By the Associated Press.

DUBLIN, Sept. 17.—First returns from Thursday's Free State parliamentary elections indicate that there will be no landslide in the direction either of the Government party or Republicans.

Both the parties of President Cosgrave and of Eamon De Valera, the Fianna Fail leader, showed increased polls which were due to the natural course of events to a diminution in the number of candidates and to accessions to the leading parties from the smaller groups.

The Farmer and Labor parties have both suffered. P. F. Baxter, leader of the Farmers' party, lost his seat in County Cavan to J. Colo, Protestant Independent, while it appeared likely that Thomas Johnson, leader of the Labor party, also would meet defeat.

James Larkin Elected.

James Larkin, Independent Labor, was elected on the first count in Dublin North. This result was not expected and is felt to indicate his return to some influence among Dublin's workers.

At midday the election figures, which probably will not be complete until next week, gave the following standings:

Government, 19; Fianna Fail, 14; Labor, 2; Farmers, 1; National League, 2; Irish Workers, 1, and Independents, 7.

Cosgrave himself led the poll in Cork City with a substantial balance over the Republican candidate, former Lord Mayor French, who took second place in the preferences. The president of the council received 17,395 votes, against 11,608 for French.

Disorder Marks Election.

Belated dispatches show that disorder and bloodshed at some points, although the elections were quietly conducted throughout most of the country. John Curran, a laborer, was fatally shot at Rathfoe, and William Grogan was killed in a scuffle between rival parties at Kilcock, County Kildare. Two other men were wounded in the Raphoe affair and three arrests were made.

Perusal of the ballot slips reveals that many votes preferred to give their political views rather than vote. One citizen in North Dublin scratched out the names on all the candidates and deposited with the ballot a photograph of the Prince of Wales, marked "God bless him."

Shoots Estranged Wife; Kills Self.

By the Associated Press.

NORFOLK, Va., Sept. 17.—William H. Schmitt, 41 years old, consul here for Ecuador and Peru and plant superintendent in Portsmouth for the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, last night shot and wounded his estranged wife, Florence Baldwin Schmitt, 35, and then killed himself.

The shooting followed the granting of a separation and alimony of $50 per month to Mrs. Schmitt.

Finally, Dr. Stresemann hailed the present assembly as one of the most important in the League's history because of its high morale, expressing the belief that this was weightier in the long run than solemn treaties.

LONGER JAIL TERM ASKED FOR INDIANA DRY LEAGUE HEAD

"Misunderstood," Watson Says.

Watson's letter to Shumaker said that what he tried to say over the telephone was that the Supreme Court was on vacation and that therefore he thought it would not act on the contempt case until after the election. Watson said he did not intend to tell Shumaker that the court would only fine him but that was just his own conclusion.

Shumaker's statement issued last night follows in part:

"I called on Senator Robinson at his home to protest against the delay in the decision of the case (the contempt case pending in the Supreme Court) and expressed the belief that Arthur Gilliom was holding this over my head like a club to prevent me from making any recommendations for the Supreme Court during the campaign.

"It was then that he called Senator Watson on the phone and told him how I felt about the matter.

"I was invited to step to the phone and Senator Watson spoke to me in substance as follows: "'Doctor, I have done something in this case entirely different to anything I have done before. I have talked to three of the judges and they are the three who are not supposed to be friendly to you. They have assured me that you will never be sent to jail and that there will be nothing done in your case until after the election.'

"I asked him what could be done at that time.

"His answer was that they would fine me but not deprive me of my liberty. In order to hear from him in writing I wrote him a letter the next day. He replied and gave a different statement than the one he had given over the phone claiming I had misunderstood him."

Senator Robinson's Statement.

Senator Robinson's statement follows:

"My only conversation with Senator Watson at Washington concerning the Shumaker case was to express my sincere sympathy for Dr. Shumaker and to discuss its effect on the Republican party.

"Early in August, 1926, Dr. Shumaker came to my home and said in substance that while he did not desire to influence the decision of the court he would like to have it decide his case at an early date.

"I told him that I could do nothing in the matter and he asked me if I would call Senator Watson (James E. Watson, senior Indiana Senator) and tell him how he felt. This I did and after reaching the Senator I asked him to talk to Shumaker personally. He did this and, of course, I do not know what conversation took place between them."

Senator Watson, replying to a letter from Shumaker denied that he intended to say that the Supreme Court had determined not to decide his case until after the election. Senator Watson pointed out the uncertainty of telephonic communication and declared that what he tried to say was that inasmuch as the Supreme Court had adjourned for the summer vacation he thought that the case would not be decided until after the election. He said he was only giving his inference.

"Furthermore," Senator Watson said, "I did not intend to say to you that the court had decided to not send you to jail but to fine you and reprimand you. I have no authority for making a statement of that kind. When Arthur Robinson came to me at Washington . . . he said he was exceedingly anxious for me to work in my own way consistently with my views in regard to the courts to keep you from going to jail. I wrote a number of letters through Indiana that I hoped might be helpful in bringing about such a conclusion. I was not in a position to either write to any judge of the Supreme Court or to discuss the matter with him over the telephone."

Blood Test Relied on To Solve Baby Case

MRS. SAM SMITH of Cleveland, O., is shown holding the baby girl which she says is not hers. She and her husband maintain the baby born to her in a Cleveland hospital was a boy.

Fingerprint Experts Also Asked by Cleveland Judge to Help Decide Mother's Claim on Boy Infant.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 17.—While a heartbroken mother lay in a hospital here praying for the return of her "son" as she nursed a baby girl, Judge Carl V. Weygandt looked forward to a conference Monday morning with masters of the medical profession to solve a tangle that would test the wisdom of a Solomon.

The press of business in Common Pleas Court forced him to postpone a personal visit to the hospital until Monday. Last Saturday the tangle was brought to Judge Weygandt's court when Sam Smith, father of the child, instituted habeas corpus proceedings demanding that Fairview Park Hospital officials be forced to return his child, "George Smith."

Mrs. Smith is nursing a baby girl which hospital officials claim is the child born to her Aug. 22. They also claim that the tangle resulted from a "clerical error" made at the hospital. But the doubt of a mother is not dispelled by their explanation, and the child's father vowed that he "would spend every penny I have to straighten out this tangle."

Grand Jury Inquiry Likely.

Meantime, the possibility that the grand jury may be called upon to investigate the case was seen when County Prosecutor Stanton assured Charles F. McConnell, attorney for Mrs. Smith, that "the grand jury will make an exhaustive inquiry without delay if there is the least bit of evidence of perjury or hint of criminality in the case."

Dr. John G. Spenzer, Dr. H. B. Glendennig, and half a dozen other leading blood specialists here, together with finger-print experts and other scientific men hope to devolve a means of solving the tangle at Monday's meeting from the world's mass of scientific knowledge.

Science, capable of solving some of nature's most intricate problems, was the chief hope of the judge, as he prepared to press further into the case. Experts here have said that blood tests, fingerprints and facial characteristics can all be used to aid in the solution, and the judge remained firm that no stone should remain unturned in the attempt to dispel a mother's doubt as to the parentage of the child she nurses.

Decision to call the medical experts was made at a conference between McConnell and William E. Brooks, attorney for the hospital, with Judge Weygandt. The judge said he would take the specialists and attorneys with him on a visit to the hospital Monday afternoon when he plans to question the nurses and examine the baby personally.

For eight days after the birth of the disputed child, nurses and doctors told Mrs. Smith she was the mother of a boy. She then discovered the child she had in her arms was a girl and hospital officials then explained it was a clerical error. The same day Mrs. Smith's baby was born two other women by the name of Smith gave birth to boy babies.

Charge Shuffle of Babies.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Smith hold that there was a shuffle of babies and that hospital officials in some manner lost identification of their baby giving it to another mother while they received a girl in its place.

Nurses attending Mrs. Smith have said they erroneously told the attending physician the baby was a boy when in fact it was a girl. The doctor who attended the other two Mrs. Smiths, who now nurse boys, said that he was certain his patients had received the right children. These two Smith families assert they have their own children.

INDIGNANT GOSSIP LED TO 2 ARRESTS FOR GANG KILLING

False Report That Boy Had Been Slain With Alphonse Palazzolo Started Italian Tongues.

Police have interfered rudely with the local tradition that gangsters may avenge gang murder by killing the slayer without recourse to trial by jury.

When Alphonse Palazzolo, notorious gunman, was assassinated at Tenth and Wash streets a week ago yesterday, police were morally certain he was killed because of a belief in gang circles that he was responsible for the assassination, Aug. 9, of Tony Russo and Vincent Spicuzza, on a road near Chicago, and the subsequent assassination in downtown St. Louis of Benjamin Giamanco.

More than 30 men were arrested only to be released because tangible evidence was lacking. It appeared the Palazzolo case, like previous gang homicides, would never reach the courts, and would have an echo only on some street corner where Palazzolo's enemies might fall under fire.

Held Without Bond.

It so happened, however, that a 10-year-old boy had been wounded slightly when Palazzolo was fired upon, and erroneous rumors spread through the downtown Italian district that the boy had been killed. Indignation was rife over the boy's reported death, and gossip blamed two Italians for the shooting.

Investigation of the rumors resulted yesterday in the issuance of a warrant charging Joseph Bommarito and Ralph Callico with the murder of Palazzolo. They are held without bond, and it is the intention of the Circuit Attorney to place them on trial for their lives as soon as possible. In recent years no gangsters have been tried for gang murders.

Police refused to disclose the nature of the evidence against the men, but it is understood there has been an identification made. Names of witnesses are withheld, to prevent intimidation.

Bommarito, known as "Bananas," has been arrested often for carrying weapons, and now is appealing from a two-year sentence for that crime. Callico also has been arrested frequently. Both were friends of the slain "Shorty" Russo, and Callico was a pal of the slain Giamanco.

Four Others Also Held.

Also arrested yesterday were William Russo, brother of "Shorty"; his brother-in-lay, Tony Aiello; John Griffen, friend of Giamanco, and Tony De Tripini, half owner of the sugar storeroom in front of which Palazzolo was killed. De Tripini was wounded by a stray bullet then. When arrested last night, a clip of cartridges for an automatic pistol was found in his automobile.

It will be recalled that William Russo, a few minutes before Palazzolo was killed, rushed into the Carr Street Police Station and begged for protection. While he was there, Palazzolo was shot down a block away, and thus Russo has an alibi. Russo insists he knew nothing of the plans to kill Palazzolo. He says he sought refuge in the police station because he had heard there was to be a shooting, and he feared for his life.

Remarries Divorced Wife.

TWO DOWNTOWN AIRPORT SITES RECOMMENDED

Subcommittee Suggests Tracts South of East St. Louis or Near Bissell's Point for Landing.

Two "downtown" airports, one on land to be reclaimed along the North St. Louis river front and one in a farm area three miles south of the center of East St. Louis, are recommended by the technical sub-committee of the Municipal Airport Plan and Scope Committee, in its report submitted to the Mayor yesterday afternoon.

The committee recommended the two plans not as alternatives, but as desirable. In addition, it urges that the city purchase land north of Lambert-St. Louis Field, as an extension of the field, and that it later acquire Lambert Field as a "roundhouse" for planes, and a center of aviation industries and schools. The East Side port could be placed in use much sooner than that in North St. Louis, as the latter must be taken from the Mississippi's bed.

The East Side tract is southwest of the Illinois Central tracks and southeast of tracks of the Missouri Pacific's eastern division, and is reached by upper Cahokia road. A street car line runs near the northwest corner. It is approximately a mile square, and is mostly level, though having some low ground which could be filled in. Goose Lake was formerly on the tract, but was drained. The ground has never been flooded from the Mississippi, so far as could be learned.

Has Requisites for Landing Field.

Setting forth its plan, which was based on a report by B. Russell Shaw, airport expert, the technical committee said:

"The Illinois location has all the requisites for a municipal downtown landing field with railroads, street cars and hard roads, and within twenty minutes of our downtown district by actual trial. This land is under cultivation and is not subject to floods or high water. It is so shaped, almost square, as to allow runways in every direction of over 5000 feet. It appears to be the best tract available for the purpose, and with sufficient area to allow the fast planes of the future, weighing from 15,000 to 25,000 pounds, to land and take off. It is not on the river, and therefore will not permit of a seaplane landing field. Because of possibilities of amphibian planes capable of landing either on the water or on the land we recommend this proposition for first consideration as the most logical and practical site for a municipal landing field.

"Mr. Shaw's report also shows the possibility of reclaiming approximately 2500 or more acres of land on the west side of the river extending north from Bissell's Point to the south line of the Chain of Rocks property. This reclaimed land would give St. Louis the finest airport in the world, and would in addition provide a park area, industrial district or residential section. The project is at present under consideration by the City Plan Commission.

"It would take some years to construct but in making this recommendation we are looking ahead when in five years from now aerial transportation in all forms will be as common and as general as the railroads and the automobile. Few cities are making adequate provision beyond present-day needs. In this St. Louis has a great opportunity. We recommend that this proposition be taken up at once through proper channels with our city officials and the City Plan Commission.

Lambert Field Unsuited.

"Lambert-St. Louis Field cannot be considered as a downtown landing field, but it should be enlarged and used as a base of operations for air mail and passenger planes and as a "roundhouse" for the proposed downtown landing field. It is available for commercial aviation, would be an excellent site for aviation industries, an aviation school and for privately owned planes, exhibitions, West End landing field and for many other purposes.

"The existence of this field as an aviation center is asured for the next seven years or until such time as the proposed North Side port can materialize. We recommend that Lambert Field be enlarged by the purchase by the city of 76 acres of adjoining land on the north. An option on this adjoining land has been secured until Dec. 15, 1927. This additional land is served by Bridgeton Station road on the west and the Wabash Railroad on the north. It would be highly desirable for aviation industries, several of which are considering a St. Louis location.

"To summarize this report, we recommend:

"That the citizens and commercial interests of St. Louis join with those of East St. Louis in building a landing field on the Illinois site.

"The immediate acquisition by the city, if possible, of the land adjoining Lambert Field on the north and the subsequent exercising by the city of its option to purchase Lambert Field from the present owner at such time as that acquisition might be warranted either from municipal revenue or by a special bond issue.

"The appointment of a committee to actively work on the proposition for the reclamation of property north of Bissell's Point."

24 Locations Suggested.

The two airport sites were chosen by Shaw, and recommended by him to the technical committee, consisting of Albert Bond Lambert, Maj. C. R. Wassall and Randall Foster, from a list of 24 suggested locations inspected by Shaw. All but the two were rejected by the expert, his report states, because of restricted area, lack of necessary requisites, prohibitive cost of grading, or as otherwise impossible. Several of the areas were in the Union Station neighborhood, but all these were rejected because of inadequate size and faulty contour.

Lafayette Park, 1000 feet square, was rejected as too small. As to the landing field on the south side of Forest Park, once used for mail planes, it is said to be "a good emergency field, and should not be considered in any other light." For general use, particularly by large planes, the size is declared inadequate and the surroundings hazardous.

Tracts suggested in the Lindenwood, Carondelet Park and Morganford road neighborhoods were found to be of rolling character, making the cost of grading excessive. Cabaret Island, in the Mississippi, is large enough and is level, but is below high water level, is not within 20 minutes of downtown by any present facility, and has dangerous high tension wires to the east.

Alternative Site Proposed.

In case the proposed East Side site cannot be obtained, Shaw suggests an alternative site west of Cahokia.

Landing platforms are declared impracticable and unsafe, in the present development of aircraft. In reply to suggestions as to use of the river for seaplane landings, Shaw says the river is too full of partly submerged logs and other floating debris to invite seaplane landings.

Suggestions of an airport "shuttle service" between Lambert Field and the proposed downtown airport, do not appear practicable to Shaw, considering the requirements of passenger and baggage space. It would take several small taxiplanes, he points out, to carry the passengers who would get off one large plane at Lambert Field.

Printer-Pastor to Play Saxophone at Service

With Daughter and Two Sons, the Rev. B. L. Morris Will Form Quartet at Tower Grove Christian Church.

A saxophone trio and a saxophone and cornet quartet, playing only sacred music, are a part of the services at the Tower Grove Park Christian Church, Kingshighway and Reber place, which holds its homecoming day tomorrow.

The quartet is composed of the Rev. B. L. Morris, his daughter and two sons. The Rev. Mr. Morris, who on week days is a linotype operator employed by the Daily Record, law publication, has assumed the pastorate of the church at a nominal salary. He and the congregation are trying to lift a mortgage on the church building, which consists of a roofed basement.

Disaster in the form of factional rows overtook the church three years ago and split the congregation in half. Then a minister came who did not suit the majority of the congregation and there was another division. By this time the congregation was so small that there was talk of selling the church. One faction put up a "For Sale" sign, but a small group of loyal members assumed sufficient of the church's obligations to carry on its work.

The continued operation of the church was made possible largely through Pastor Morris' willingness to serve for a small salary. Mr. Morris has been an evangelist and pastor in various towns for 24 years, at the same time carrying on his work as a printer. He is a member of St. Louis Typographical Union, Local No. 8.

NINE, NOT 900, LOST OFF SHIP

Reported Sinking of Japanese Steamer in Storm Denied.

TOKIO, Sept. 17.—Reports received today by the newspaper Hochi state that the Japanese steamship Wusung Maru, reported yesterday to have sunk with the loss of 900 working men, reached Hakodate safely on Sept. 4 after encountering a heavy storm off the Kurile Islands.

The newspaper says the ship, owned by the Kawasaki Steamship Co., lost only nine sailors, who were washed overboard during the storm. The steamer was carrying 1000 coolie fishermen from Kamchatka, Siberia, back to Japan. The dispatches say the storm was on Aug. 31.

BOTTLE OF LIQUOR SPOILS SMUGGLING PLOT FOR THREE

Mother, Son, 17, and Daughter, 11, Discovered Aboard Freighter in New York Harbor.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—For 12 days aboard a small freighter, a mother, her 15-year-old son and 11-year-old daughter, successfully passed unnoticed among the crew of the ship, only to have their bold attempt to smuggle themselves into America defeated by a bottle of liquor.

Yesterday Inspector John Sweeney led his searching squad aboard the Lloyd Royal Belge freighter Mercer, which arrived from Antwerp. The object of their search was contraband liquor, but the vessel proved a dry one until they reached the quarters of Bo'sn John Vandermer.

Girl Found in Pantry.

In a pantry of his cabin, attention was attracted by a small bottle which had been previously opened. This led them to continue search in this direction and in the back wall of the pantry, partially concealed by eating utensils, they detected a small frame. They ripped this open.

They were greeted they said, with the "face of an angel"—little Maria VanLeberge, whose eager, smiling face was framed like a picture by the opening.

"When taken from the hidden closet, it was found she had been standing on a cache of 77 bottles of assorted liquor, which the customs officials claim belong to the B'w'n.

The girl refused to give any information.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Reed or Smith, Which?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I WAS very much impressed on reading Col. Bennett Clark's recent public statement, urging that the Missouri delegates to the Democratic national convention be instructed to support Senator James A. Reed for the Democratic nomination for President, and, furthermore, to stick to him, "hook, line and sinker" to the last ditch. I was not only impressed, I was also somewhat surprised, coming as the statement did from one who is far from being a novice in politics; because the statement, "hook, line and sinker," and to the last ditch, with the present very favorable outlook of the Democratic party, is not wise politics.

Let us remember that Mr. Reed has made many irreconcilable enemies. During his 18 years in public life he has uttered many strong sentiments on every great national and international question and he has rarely had a majority with him on his side. The majorities, it seems, were always in the opposition. Certainly, Mr. Reed is strong—very strong, but if the opposition is stronger he cannot be elected; surely, the Democratic party does not want to put up a man merely to honor him with—defeat! Consider the animus with which he hurled a relentless and almost pitiless defiance into the camp of Woodrow Wilson's admirers. What would not many of them give, and their name is legion, to strike a blow in honor of their fallen chief, silently but effectively at the polls, if Senator Reed were a presidential candidate?

Furthermore, Mr. Reed's official association more recently with the self-effaced Henry Ford and his anti-Jewish propaganda has not made the Jewish race any friendlier to Mr. Reed; and their name, too, is legion. The German-Americans may probably vote for him "hook, line an l sinker," but, would their support give the Senator any certain brief for the American presidency? Though we may consider Senator Reed "available," I cannot see in him a winner; and as for me, all else being equal, I am for a winner, "hook, line and sinker."

Now, let us briefly consider Gov. Smith of New York. Let me say to the readers at the outset that, religiously speaking, I am a Protestant, but, politically speaking, Gov. Smith looks to me like a winner. And, since by constitutional enactment, no religious test shall ever be required of any candidate for political preferment in the United States of America, and, since Gov. Smith has by his late unanswered and unanswerable public letter, convinced me and most other intelligent Protestant Democrats that he stands firm and unwavering on the American principle of strict separation of church and state, I am ready to urge him for the Democratic nomination for the presidency and to vote for him if he is nominated.

So, I am for "Al" Smith, the popular East Side Governor of New York. The Democratic party will make the most serious mistake in its whole turbulent history if they should deny Mr. Smith this nomination.

JUSTITIA ET LUX ESTO.

Self-Help for Olive Street.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

YOU are doing good work in trying to get action on the widened Olive street problem. But, while waiting for a court decision and the subsequent paving work which may not begin this year, why do not the property owners and store keepers combine to clear up the debris, and compel the United Railways to take away the heaps of cobble stones on the south side? There is no injunction against clearing up and leveling the south side of the street, filling the holes and tidying up in preparation for the paving. A month's vigorous action on this line would make the street presentable, removing all obstructions, and giving access to all the stores. It would pay for itself. CITIZEN.

Trapping Pigeons.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

CONSIDER the cruelty of mothers who let their boys trap all the pigeons of the neighborhood and house them all in a small place, knocking their wings against the sides of the place to get their freedom which the Lord had given them. It is pathetic to see them. I called the attention of the Humane Society to it but they have neglected, or, are too busy to look after this. This is in the 5100 block on Maple avenue. It seems so desolate without our pigeons.

Amplifiers Needed in Court Rooms.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I WAS in City Court No. 2 on a traffic charge the other day. I arrived at 9 o'clock and Judge Beck had quite a number of instructions to give out before the actual disposition of cases was taken up. He was very anxious that every one in the courtroom hear the instructions. I sat about five rows back and it was all I could do to hear what the Judge had to say. It appears to me it would be a very sensible thing to install an amplifier, megaphone or some device for increasing the sound of the voice where it is essential that people hear all that is going on.

L. P. WOODWARD.

THE DOG-RACING SCANDAL.

Residents of St. Louis County who are organizing in opposition to dog racing as it is being conducted are justified. The unregulated dog races are a scandal. All unregulated racing is a scandal. It was the absence of regulation that drove horse racing out of so many of the states. Only by the most obvious regulation has it ever been able to come back.

Surely no sane person can believe that the unregulated dog races are good for the public. It is commonly supposed that the tracks take from 10 to 15 per cent of the money waged on the races. There is, however, no one authorized to see that they limit themselves to this percentage. They can make it as much as they like, and when has human nature so changed that it does not take all it can get?

The dog-racing tracks are plainly aware of their peril. They know that neither horse racing nor dog racing will be long tolerated without the precautions which have been thrown around racing wherever it has beaten its way back, and they are frankly getting all they can while the getting is good. It is as certain that the next Legislature will fall upon dog racing as it is that the sun will rise tomorrow. No one in authority knows what the tracks are taking for their share, nor does anyone doubt that the public is being gouged. The county should be ashamed of itself to permit it.

Unfortunately, St. Louis County has no shame. There is apparently nothing that it will not permit. If no other reason for joining city and county had been advanced, it would have been morally sufficient to have said that the county should be policed by the city. There may be other communities in the United States as lawless as the county is. There may be places where the authorities are as shamelessly in league with vice. There may be other communities as indifferent as it is to a veritable Roman holiday for the underworld. If so, we would hate to drive through them by night.

The Post-Dispatch has twice warned the dog tracks. It has told them that unless they make themselves respectable their time is short. We do not intend to repeat these warnings. If the respectable citizens of the county are not numerous and strong enough to force the dog tracks into a policy of decency, then the county is badly off indeed.

THE GREAT COOLIDGE SUPERSTITION.

The nation's business leaders persist in proving that Frank Kent, Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun, knew whereof he spoke when he said business men were boobs in politics. Members of the Platform for American Industry Committee, now meeting in New York, have just done so by declaring that American business men will force President Coolidge to accept another nomination in 1928.

Thus the blind devotion of our industrial and commercial supermen to Coolidge goes on, despite the President's declaration that he does not choose to run. The notion that the fate of business depends upon the former Councilman from Northampton, Mass., is one which will not down. It is useless to tell the industrialists, traders and financiers that all the other candidates so far mentioned for the nomination in 1928 are quite as friendly to business as Calvin. They are as deaf to the qualities of Hughes, Hoover, Dawes and Lowden as they would be to those of Borah, were he seriously mentioned as a candidate.

The remarkable thing about all this devotion to the President as the ideal candidate for business is that not one great devotee can tell us why he should be preferred to others who are quite as conservative and immensely more able. The business man's worship of Calvin, in fact, smacks less of reason now than it has in the past. It is no longer something to be tested by rational processes. It has, in fine, become a sort of superstition.

EDUCATION VS. VIOLENCE.

Kate Richards O'Hare, who was one of those upon whom our intolerance laid a heavy hand during the war, says that education and not violence is the hope of liberalism in the United States.

She might have made it the world. The gratifying thing about it is that the world sees it. There is not a liberal Government upon earth that is not trying to lift up its masses with education. They have all found that to march in any direction with guns comes to nothing at last, whereas to march to the little red schoolhouse in youth and thence into the world means an enlightened people capable of governing themselves.

Indeed, violence is the arch enemy of liberalism. The Russian communists, by seizing the Government and wreaking their vengeance upon the upper classes, have done liberalism all over the world a very grave injury. Those countries are least threatened by violence which have educated their people. It was education, disseminated through the masses in Germany, that constituted the chief barrier to bolshevism in its advance upon Western Europe. The United States, which has popular education, is the best-governed country. Turkey and Mexico, in which the masses were uneducated and underfoot, are trying to rise through the schoolhouse.

Mrs. O'Hare is, in our opinion, a very enlightened liberal. She is not an agitator in some industrial center where she can exploit the passions of ignorance. She is a teacher in a country school where children can be taught to think.

People who are abusing the Goosebone Man forget that he did not tell us what kind of autumn we would have.

WHO'S BANDIT-RIDDEN NOW.

Bandits recently attacked a train in Sonora, Mexico, killing some of the passengers. Since then, travelers returning from that region report the spectacle of 38 bandits hanging from trees beside the tracks. Will this make any difference to our imperialistic newspapers which constantly hold up the "bandit-ridden" condition of Mexico as an excuse for intervention? We beg leave to doubt it. To our imperialists the sin of Mexico is not that she has bandits, but that she has oil, copper, silver, gold and land. The method used by strong nations to suppress banditry in weak ones is very well known. It consists in seizing their natural resources.

If banditry were a sufficient excuse for intervention what country would offer the most legical field? Our own, of course. Chicago furnishes more acts of banditry, and more murders occasioned by banditry, than the whole of Mexico. Yet nobody ever reported seeing any bandits hanging to trees around Chicago. Most of them hang around their lawyers' offices, clad in fine raiment and oozing prosperity.

Perhaps the Mexican treatment of bandits is rather too drastic. But at least it shows a disposition to meet the situation. Until we show a disposition to deal with our own bandits, it behooves us to keep silent about Mexico, where they hang them to trees along the track, 38 at a time.

THE ST. LAWRENCE AND THE MISSISSIPPI.

After some years of propagation, after frequent indorsement by officials of both Canada and the United States, after being accepted by the public of the two countries as a settled policy, the St. Lawrence Waterway appears at present to be approximately as near realization as it was the day it was conceived. To be more explicit, W. L. Mackenzie King, Canadian Prime Minister, has announced that his Government refuses to proceed with the project.

The reasons assigned for this belated refusal are numerous and varied. The newspaper owned by George P. Graham, a powerful member of the Canadian Senate, declares that the explanation is the lowering of lake levels by the Chicago drainage canal, and the Montreal Gazette shares this belief. From Washington comes the rumor that the refusal of our Government to show interest in Prime Minister King's proposals for reciprocity is at the bottom of Canada's reluctance in the present affair. Mr. King's own explanation is that his Government wishes more time to consider the proposed waterway.

Though all of these reasons no doubt play their part in the Canadian reluctance to proceed in the matter, they are unquestionably not the fundamental one. This, according to the most penetrating observers, is the threat which the waterway holds for Canadian railway, shipping and financial interests, and for the port of Montreal. These interests fear—and not without good reason, either—that the realization of the St. Lawrence Waterway would mean that much of their business would be transferred to American railways, shipping lines and ports upon the Great Lakes.

Obviously, this leaves the project in what appears like a stalemate. It has become an affair of Canadian politics, and nothing the United States can do will apparently be of much moment. But while many will assert that this is unfortunate, we believe that a little thought will indicate that it is not by any means an unmixed evil. To the friends of the Mississippi waterway project, indeed, it should prove a powerful boon. It should enable these crusaders in a worthy cause to concentrate all the sentiment in favor of waterway development, which has hitherto been divided between the St. Lawrence and the Mississippi projects, upon the latter. It should enable them to show the farming interests of the Middle West, to whom the St. Lawrence Waterway has been presented as the ideal means of getting their products to the sea at low cost, that they have an even better possible waterway within their own territory.

While Canadians hesitate and haggle among themselves is the opportunity for friends of the Mississippi. Let them grasp it without delay and enjoy it to the limit. Let them demand that we immediately develop this great system of waterways which lies entirely within our nation. Let them demand that before the national treasury be tapped to rehabilitate a waterway which might or might not be a benefit to the American farmer of the Middle West, the great artery of commerce at his doorstep be once more made available for use.

A VICTORY FOR VIRTUE.

Out of consideration to certain protesting disciples of Anthony Comstock, there are no nudes in the twenty-second annual exhibition of American paintings at the City Art Museum. All of the human figures are discreetly clothed and no one's moral sense, no matter how squeamish, will be outraged by a tour of the galleries. This, no doubt, is a great victory for virtue, though Director Sherer says he sees nothing objectionable in most of the nudes painted today.

It is somewhat of a jest that those who are protected from the moral hazard of gazing on the undraped human form in the Art Museum may make prolonged, intimate and uninterrupted studies of anatomy on Olive or any other crowded street. In these days of bare knees and cobweb raiment, nudes, in the famous words of the London cab conductor, ain't no treat at all.

As we understand the situation, business men would like to see the promoters of dog racing continue to make tracks.

THEY STILL READ THEM.

In the London Daily Express, a writer of books for boys lately hymned a mournful lay because, so he thought, boys could no longer be intrigued by the thrills which appealed to earlier generations.

A few days afterwards a survey of what English boys were reading proved that this writer did not know what he was talking about. It showed that they were still reading detective stories, and that Sherlock Holmes was still their chief hero.

If the survey had been extended to include adults, the result would probably have been the same. The detective story may be undergoing a process of evolution, but the classic tradition inaugurated by Conan Doyle refuses to forego any of its great popularity. Poe may have invented the detective story, though Michael Sadlier, the English novelist, recently declared that it was a modern form of those weird "Gothic" romances of the eighteenth century. But Conan Doyle made it a distinctive and popular literary form. Some of the later writers who have worked in his tradition have even excelled him in certain ways. A good example is S. S. Van Dine, one of whose mystery stories is now running in the Post-Dispatch, and who has made of Philo Vance a character infinitely more human that Sherlock Holmes.

As the Nation recently pointed out, there is nothing more ridiculous than the notion that mystery stories need be cheap or light or inferior. The fact that great minds enjoy them is proof that some mystery stories are none of these things. Woodrow Wilson was an insatiable reader of detective stories, and unblushingly recommended them. Like other great minds, his seemed to obtain from the mystery and terror of such stories just the exercise it required. It would have got that exercise from reading of Vance, had he been created during Wilson's lifetime, just as it once obtained it from following Holmes, and later from observing the characters in the detective yarns of J. S. Fletcher, the English novelist and historian.

Some pay $40 a seat to see Tunney and Dempsey fight. Others prefer to watch two kids battle in an alley.

THE MISSOURI RIVER NEXT.

From the Waterways Journal.

THE first real comprehensive effort by the United States Government toward improvement of inland rivers was the canalization of the Ohio River from Pittsburg to Cairo. This work is rapidly nearing completion and by the time another 12 months has rolled around the Ohio River—"La Belle Riviere"—will be slack watered for its entire length, approximately 1000 miles. At the present writing, all of the locks and dams between Pittsburg and Henderson, Ky., are completed and are in use, and rapid progress is being made on the construction of the locks and dams in the lower end of the Ohio River.

For a number of years, the Federal barge line between St. Louis and New Orleans has been in successful operation. In fact, so much tonnage is now tendered, that the barge line cannot handle it all, and it was recently necessary for shippers and barge line officials to hold a meeting for the purpose of alloting future space to individual shippers.

The Upper Mississippi River Barge line operated by the Federal Barge line, is now in operation. The towboat S. S. Thorpe, the first boat to start in the St. Louis-St. Paul service, will have completed her maiden trip by the time this issue is off the press. The second towboat, C. C. Webber, is en route down the Mississippi River and will complete her initial trip next week. The third towboat, General Ashburn, is expected to leave Dubuque early next week for St. Louis. With boats and barges "built to fit the river" the Upper Mississippi project started out auspiciously, thereby proving the assertion of the business interests along the upper Mississippi who furnished the funds to construct the towboats and barges, that that stream could be navigated on less than five feet of water.

The business men along the Missouri should emulate the example set by those of the upper Mississippi, raise the necessary funds, build suitable towboats and barges and turn the plant over to the Federal Barge line to operate. It is said that over one million dollars are being held in bank by Missouri River business men awaiting the United States Government to provide a 6-foot channel in that stream. There is but four and a half feet of boating water in the upper Mississippi, yet towboats and barges "to fit the river" were built and are in operation. Pilots who have spent their lives on Missouri River emphatically state that they find four and a half feet in that stream, generally more, at least from Kansas City to the mouth. If business men in the Missouri River Valley want cheap freight rates, it looks to an outsider, as if they can obtain them by following the example set by the upper Mississippi River interests by building boats to operate on the water now in Missouri River.

DYSPEPTIC NOTE.

From Ed Howe's Monthly.

WE have given women liberty, but they are not using it much better than the rioting Russians. Would not women improve more if men were less gallant? What is gallantry but a lie? And was a lie ever told except for a mischievous purpose? Gallantry always fails; women are never deceived by it; they know what men are up to when making gallant speeches.

A GOOD SPENDER.

From the Dayton News.

FROM one "end" of the world to the other, Rockefeller money is fighting disease. There is no room here to list or discuss the ways in which the Rockefeller fortune is supporting science in its researches, art in its necessities and education in many fields not reached by public money. The Rockefeller benefactions in 1926 ranged all the way from the reconstruction of the cathedral at Rheims to nearly eight millions in social science research. The Rockefeller gifts, it is enough to say, have been made with rare wisdom. To give away money without doing more harm than good is as difficult as to get the money in the first place.

This last gift of the junior Rockefeller is a brilliant climax to the long series of wise benefactions. There has collected at Geneva, in connection with the manifold labors of the League of Nations, a vast mass of literature bearing on the problems under consideration. A great international library is in process of accumulation there. It needs housing. A gift of $2,000,000 by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., for a library building at Geneva has been accepted by the league.

A better use for such an amount of money it would be hard to find. We are especially gratified that such a gift for such a purpose should come from an American. The exigencies of its internal politics has kept the United States thus far from giving official support to the league on which turns the world's hope for a world governed by justice rather than by international violence. If the American government cannot help, the American people can. Mr. Rockefeller has nobly done his "bit."

LOWDEN IN MISSOURI.

From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

THE indorsement of Frank O. Lowden for President by the Missouri Farmers' Association is somewhat less important than it sounds. That particular association is, in a manner of speaking, the hand-made product of one of its own officers. It includes the more "radical" of the "Show-Me State" farmers and has never been a considerable political factor in Missouri. This same association gave Senator "Jim" Reed a tongue-lashing, denouncing him for "betraying agriculture to gain the favor of Eastern industrialists." In other words, Senator Reed refuses to wear the livery of McNary-Haugenism, as does Mr. Lowden. Senator Reed voted against the McNary-Haugen bill, and this group of Missouri farmers regards that as a somehow sacred measure. Nevertheless, Senator Reed is expected to have Missouri's Democratic indorsement, and just what will happen to Mr. Lowden in that State is uncertain. It was in Missouri that he was destroyed in 1920.

HERE is a romance with a thesis—a true Cabellian romance set forth with the magic of a master of his craft, and a thesis that amounts to a devastating indictment of the whole scheme of human life, quite in keeping with the much-vaunted "post-war" mood.

The tale runs, roughly, as follows:

Gerald Musgrave, a young Southern gentleman with literary leanings, grows unspeakably weary of an old liason with his cousin, Evelyn Townsend, but is unable to break away from the lady. Happily, as it seems to him, one day while pondering in his study the insufferable burden of his bondage, there appears a demon (in the original pagan sense) who makes him an exceedingly generous offer. The demon proposes to occupy the body of Gerald, assuming all the obligations incident thereto, including the continuation of the liason, thus leaving the soul of Gerald free to pursue what he, in common with others of all ages, has conceived to be the higher values.

The arrangement is readily agreed upon, and immediately Gerald finds himself on Mispec Moor in the Marches of Antan. An overwhelming hope is upon him, for travelers in that land are well convinced that yonder beyond the edge of the moor begins the Kingdom of Antan, whither all the lofty dreams of men inevitably go and there await the faithful pilgrim. Many there are who say that the kingdom is as unreal as the dreams that go thither; but every generation of travelers on the Moor of Mispec is certain of the kingdom for awhile.

Hervendille, Lord of the Marches of Antan, knowing the noble dream of Gerald, presents him with a magical stallion by way of facilitating the journey to Antan and warns him against the women who lie in wait along the way to defeat his high purpose.

JARDINE DISCONTINUES U. S. PRICE FORECASTS

Action Follows Cabinet Meeting and Protests Over Recent Cotton Report.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Secretary Jardin has forbidden the Department of Agriculture to issue forecasts of crop price trends.

The ban against the predictions was issued after he had received a flood of protests both from Southern members of Congress and leading cotton dealers against its recent report on cotton price trends which caused breaks in several markets of the country.

At a Cabinet session which lasted two hours, the longest meeting since President Coolidge took office, the report and the protests received careful consideration and following the session Jardine issued his order.

The President also announced he regarded price trend forecasts by Government departments as hazardous, but he added the clarifying of the situation would be left in the hands of the agriculture officials. Opinion among the department officials held that these forecasts were of immeasurable value to producers, but it was apparent the general public is not prepared to protect itself against "persons who use the information for unfair advantage."

Senators Caraway, Arkansas; Sheppard, Texas; Heflin, Alabama, and Harris, Georgia, all Democrats, declared the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the department in its crop reports should confine itself to actual statistics and under no circumstance make conjectures as to future price trends. Two Senators, Heflin and Harris, also asked for the immediate discharge of the employe responsible for the recent forecast on cotton, but at the department it was indicated no such action would be taken.

HERE is a romance with a theme—a true Cabellian romance set forth with the magic of a master of his craft, and a thesis that amounts to a devastating indictment of the whole scheme of human life, quite in keeping with the much-vaunted "post-war" mood.

The tale runs, roughly, as follows:

Gerald Musgrave, a young Southern gentleman with literary leanings, grows unspeakably weary of an old liason with his cousin, Evelyn Townsend, but is unable to break away from the lady. Happily, as it seems to him, one day while pondering in his study the insufferable burden of his bondage, there appears a demon (in the original pagan sense) who makes him an exceedingly generous offer. The demon proposes to occupy the body of Gerald, assuming all the obligations incident thereto, including the continuation of the liason, thus leaving the soul of Gerald free to pursue what he, in common with others of all ages, has conceived to be the higher values.

The arrangement is readily agreed upon, and immediately Gerald finds himself on Mispec Moor in the Marches of Antan. An overwhelming hope is upon him, for travelers in that land are well convinced that yonder beyond the edge of the moor begins the Kingdom of Antan, whither all the lofty dreams of men inevitably go and there await the faithful pilgrim. Many there are who say that the kingdom is as unreal as the dreams that go thither; but every generation of travelers on the Moor of Mispec is certain of the kingdom for awhile.

Hervendile, Lord of the Marches of Antan, knowing the noble dream of Gerald, presents him with a magical stallion by way of facilitating the journey to Antan and warns him against the women who lie in wait along the way to defeat his high purpose.

One by one, Gerald, mounted upon his magic steed, encounters Woman in various guises, and for long he is able to withstand their wiles, continuing on the way to the shining Kingdom of Antan. One by one they strive to gain possession of his steed, but he defeats them yet awhile, and comes to regard himself as a god, destined to rule in the kingdom of his dream. By his own proclamation, he is the Lord of the Third Truth; whereas, through the Marches of Antan there are recognized only Two Truths, all other so-called truths being stigmatized as mere fantastic piffle. And the Two Truths are the two sexes. "We breed and die," say the dwellers in that uninspired realm.

But for Gerald there is still the Kingdom of Antan yonder, where all high dreams of men come true; and this belief of Gerald's is the Third Truth.

But there comes a day when Gerald tarries by the roadside to talk with an ancient hag a little while. And it happens that, out of pity for her age, he sprinkles upon her three drops from a magical phial he carries; whereupon, she grows young and winsome, and Gerald knows her for Maya of the Fair Breasts.

And Maya presents Gerald with a pair of magic spectacles through which he sees much more than is there—so much more that, day by day, he puts off the resumption of his journey. And as he tarries there, wedded to Maya, innumerable gods and dreams and myths pass by on their way to the Kingdom of Antan. Even Jehovah passes—"an old man with a long gray beard"—and with him all heroes and poets and idealistic philosophers—the whole brood of beauty and high hope that man, presumably, has created out of nothing by way of concealing the bitter fact that there are only two truths, and that "we breed and die."

In the end, Gerald becomes a "domesticated animal," no longer believing in the Kingdom of Antan. His "Third Truth" has gone the way of all the other dreams of men.

And when Gerald finally returns to his own aged body in his library at home, he finds himself confronted with a dreaming youth, a son, created in his own image. Thereupon the whole process of illusion ends again, as it has ended untold millions of times, "with that rather hackneyed scoring, da capo."

"In a wife's lap as in a grave" once bitterly sang a British poet, "man's airy notions mix with earth." It is the old text upon which Cabell has based his fantastic sermon.

Strange beauty is to be found in the book, as in all of Cabell's work; and ever from behind the beauty, as a satyr leering out of gorgeous foliage in some haunted wood, peers a salacious, mocking spirit. "Breed and die!" it jeers. "All your notions about beauty and sanctity and wisdom, all your conceptions of super-brutal values, all your religions and your moralities and your ethics and your gods and your music and your poetry—what are they but the fig leaves of romance hung over the brutal fact that men merely breed and die?"

If Mr. Cabell believes this, one wonders that he should consider it worth the effort to say so. And the very genius which he employs in saying it would seem to render his thesis absurd.

Furthermore, Mr. Cabell does not go far enough with his philosophizing. If we are to grant that the subjective human world is "unreal," must we not also grant that the so-called objective world is quite as much an illusion? For surely even the seemingly solid, actual world of the senses is, so far as any human being knows anything at all about it, a construction in consciousness out of unverifiable sense data. And if our worlds are made within us—as assuredly they are—who is the better world-craftman, Cabell in his cynical mood or the momentarily outmoded idealist?

COOLIDGE COUNTS ON BIG TAX REDUCTION

President Does Not Believe River and Naval Appropriations Need Interfere.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Despite a prospect of increased appropriations for the Navy and War Departments and for Mississippi flood control, President Coolidge does not believe these expenditures will place a barrier to substantial tax reduction by the new Congress.

The President, after a tentative study of the next year's budget, has concluded that additional army and navy expenditures should be authorized.

While Mr. Coolidge is said to have decided that a special session for Mississippi flood legislation was not necessary, he is understood to favor early consideration of the problem in the new Congress. But the administration also is expected to favor the granting of right of way to the tax bill.

The Republican leaders, including Representative Tilson of Connecticut, House majority leader, and Speaker Longworth have put forward the suggestion that tax legislation should be the first measure on the new session's program.

The President considers that in view of the probability of the army engineers' report on flood control not being completed before Nov. 15 or Dec. 1, Congress could make no headway on this legislation before its regular meeting in December. He expected congressional committees to accomplish much preliminary work in preparation of these measures.

Advocates of a heavy tax reduction were encouraged by the President's views after his study of the budget. Administration leaders previously had estimated the tax cut would aggregate $300,000,000. During the last fiscal year a surplus of $600,000,000 was accumulated at the Treasury, but the indications are that for this fiscal year not more than half this figure will be reached. However, the drop in the surplus is not expected to prevent a substantial lowering of taxes.

The Budget Bureau soon will begin its preparation of estimates on governmental expenses for the next fiscal year and has set Sept. 26 for its first hearing on proposed departmental expenditures taking up the requirements of the Department of Agriculture.

Chairman Madden of the House Appropriations Committee has called a meeting of that body prior to the opening of Congress to consider the estimates informally, although the fiscal recommendations are not made public until the President formally transmits them in his Congressional budget message.

SAYS MEMBERSHIP OF CHURCHES GROWS

Secretary of Federal Council Cites Statistics to Prove Increase.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Officials of the Federal Council of the Churches in America today issued a statement declaring that the churches are gaining in membership.

Figures were given for 25 leading denominations, showing that they have grown almost 50 per cent in the last 20 years.

This statement was made, according to Rev. Charles S. Macfarland, general secretary of the council, in response to inquiries as to the significance of the announcement accredited to H. K. Carroll on July 30 that "the total yearly loss (of Protestant churches) would approximate about half a million."

"This estimate," said Dr. Macfarland, "has been completely misunderstood, because it had to do only with one side of the picture. It made no reference to the additions of new members year by year. For example, the Rev. Frederick L. Fagley of the Congregational Commission on Evangelism, was quoted as saying that about 30,000 members are lost from the rolls of that denomination annually, but no mention was made of the fact that 75,000 are added to these rolls each year and that the percentage of increase in membership is greater than that of the population of the country.

"The fact is that the net result for all Protestant denominations has been a gain in membership considerably in excess of the growth in population."

"How utterly false are the impressions that the churches are losing in membership is shown by the figures of the United States Government census of religious bodies in 1906 and 1916, supplemented by the figures for 1926 in the latest Handbook of Churches. The 25 principal denominations in the United States had a growth in total membership from 18,762,943 in 1906 to 23,638,597 in 1916 and to 27,466,470 in 1926.

"There was never a time in the history of the country when so many people belonged to the churches, never a time when a larger percentage of the population were church members.

"From 1906 to 1916, in 25 principal Protestant denominations, the net gain in membership was 4,875,654. From 1916 to 1926 the net gain was 3,827,873. This is a gain of 8,703,527 during the last 20 years. In addition to making up all their losses from death, removal and other causes, the churches have made a net increase in membership of 46.4 per cent in 20 years.

"During these 20 years, the increase in population of the country was 36.5 per cent. The churches gained in membership much faster than the population.

"It is true that when the so-called war decade (1916-1926) is taken alone the figures are not so encouraging. For these 10 years the gain in church membership was 16.2 per cent, while the gain in population was 16.3 per cent. This condition may perhaps be explained by the diversion of the church's energies during the war years. During the last half of the decade, however, a recovery has been taking place."

SUGGESTS PLAN FOR U. S.-ROME AIR SERVICE IN 24 HOURS

Italian Suggests Newfoundland and Azores for Stopover—Planes Should Be Speedy.

Copyright, 1927, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos. (New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

ROME, Sept. 17.—Gianni Caproni, whose aircraft did fine bombing work during the war, says a New York-Rome flight can be made safely in 24 hours, if builders and pilots follow a few simple rules. His plan is:

No seaplanes demanding a heavy fuel supply; at least three engines, properly equipped fueling stations at Newfoundland and the Azores, thus dividing the flight into three stages, two of 1200 miles and one of 1500. Airplanes that rise straight from the ground and are capable of touching the sea without damage and capable of flying 20,000 feet above the sea and attaining a speed of 180 miles an hour. Pilots, passengers and instruments should be inclosed in one cabin, which would be well supplied with compressed air.

JARDINE DISCONTINUES U. S. PRICE FORECASTS

Action Follows Cabinet Meeting and Protests Over Recent Cotton Report.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Secretary Jardin has forbidden the Department of Agriculture to issue forecasts of crop price trends.

The ban against the predictions was issued after he had received a flood of protests both from Southern members of Congress and leading cotton dealers against its recent report on cotton price trends which caused breaks in several markets of the country.

At a Cabinet session which lasted two hours, the longest meeting since President Coolidge took office, the report and the protests received careful consideration and following the session Jardine issued his order.

The President also announced he regarded price trend forecasts by Government departments as hazardous, but he added the clarifying of the situation would be left in the hands of the agriculture officials. Opinion among the department officials held that these forecasts were of immeasurable value to producers, but it was apparent the general puplic is not prepared to protect itself against "persons who use the information for unfair advantage."

Senators Caraway, Arkansas; Sheppard, Texas; Heflin, Alabama, and Harris, Georgia, all Democrats, declared the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the department in its crop reports should confine itself to actual statistics and under no circumstance make conjectures as to future price trends. Two Senators, Heflin and Harris, also asked for the immediate discharge of the employe responsible for the recent forecast on cotton, but at the department it was indicated no such action would be taken.

MERGER OF ELECTRIC CONCERNS AT COST OF $26,000,000

Three Pennsylvania Corporations Pool Generation Power With 2,250,000 Kilowatts.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—One of the largest electric generation pools in the world, if not the largest, has been formed by the Public Service Electric and Gas Co., the Philadelphia Electric Co. and the Pennsylvania Power and Light Co. Three main transmission lines, with a total distance of 208 miles, will tie-in the generation units of the three companies.

The inter-connection of the electric system of the three companies which, when completed, will hook the output of generation stations having a combined capacity of more than 2,250,000 kilowatts is planned.

An 82-mile transmission line will be constructed from Siegfred, Pa., to a switching station to be constructed at Roseland, near Newark, where it will connect with the lines from Kearney and other stations of the Public Service; 49-mile line will be constructed from Siegfred to a switching station to be built near Philadelphia, where it will meet lines from Conowingo and other Philadelphia electric stations.

The Roseland and Philadelphia stations will be connected by a 77-mile line. Constructing the transmission lines and switching stations will be completed in 1930 and will cost $26,000,000.

Total stock sales, 1,212,400 shares.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Heavy week-end profit taking, inspired in part by fears of a technical reaction after the recent spirited advance, turned the course of stock prices irregular today after an opening outburst of strength. General Motors issues were again the feature, soaring to new high records on an enormous volume of trading.

Bullish activities were confined largely to about a dozen specialties, including such issues as Gimbel Brothers, Greene Cananea Copper, Texas Gulf Sulphur, Dupont, Goodyear Rubber and Julius Kayser, all of which attained new peak prices. Although General Motors issues held well around their top prices, some of the other motors turned reactionary, particularly Studebaker, Hudson and Mack Trucks.

Realizing sales forced recessions of a point or so in such recent favorites as Postum, International Telephone, General Electric and Montgomery-Ward and General Railway Signal.

The closing was irregular. Total sales approximated 1,200,000 shares.

Opens Higher.

The market opened with an outburst of strength. The bulk of the buying centered in the high-priced industrials. International Harvester quickly ran up 2½ points. Brooklyn Union Gas 2, an dPeoples Gas, Houston Oil, American Smelting and U. S. Rubber showed initial gains of a point or more.

The market continued to sweep forward as heavy buying orders poured into the motor, rubber, public utility and mercantile issues.

Advance Is Rapid.

General otors (new) opened with a block of 13,000 shares at the "spread" price of 137 to 137½ and then crossed 138 to a new peak. The old stock touched 275½. Traders put a bullish interpretation on the Washington dispatches that President Coolidge believed substantial tax reduction possible despite the icreased needs of the army and navy. The rapidity of the advance led to rather extensive realizing by cautious operators, but offerings were well absorbed.

New peak prices were established in the first hour of trading by Calumet & Arizona, Consolidated Gas, Dupont, Gimbel Bros., Goodyear, Peoples Gas and Texas Gulf Sulphur. There were only a few soft spots, commercial solvents, which recorded a sensational advance yesterday, falling back 4 points.

Foreign exchanges opened firm with sterling at the year's high of $4.86½ for cables.

WEEK-END BOND MARKET QUIET WITH DEPRESSED PRICE LEVEL

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Week-end profit-taking depressed the general price level in the bond market today, but losses were limited to fractions in practically every instance. In view of easy money conditions and the attractiveness of high grade investment securities, offerings were comparatively small and readily taken.

A few convertible issues were in demand at fractionally better prices.

Realizing was most pronounced in the railroad division, small losses being sustained by such issues as Denver & Rio Grande Western 4s, Western Maryland 4 and Seaboard 5s. Rubber issues also were soft, the 5 per cent liens of both Goodyear and U. S. Rubber declining around a quarter of a point. Aside from softening of Third Avenue, 5s, little of interest transpired in the utility group.

French bonds were again easy, perticularly the Governmental 7½s and 8s. Other Foreign obligations drew little attention. United States Governmen securities were extremely quiet.

Gideon Pays $9[illegible]

Broad Axe Gains a[illegible] Tainted Victory [illegible] Feature Race E[illegible]

By Dent McSkimming, Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

FAIRMOUNT RACE TRACK, Sept. 17.—Broad Axe sc[illegible] garded as a tainted victory in the fifth and feature r[illegible] noon's program, the East St. Louis Journal handicap.

Two factors tended to eliminate most serious competition of[illegible] in the race. Indianapolis get[illegible] off to a very bad start when assistant starter obstructed his [illegible], and Good Shepherd receiving extremely weak ride from [illegible]mmy Root.

In both cases these circumstances were plainly visible to the crowd of 10,000 and brought shouts of disapproval.

As usual, the opening race, in which the contestants were maidens—horses that have never scored a victory—provided an upset. Gideon, owned and trained by C. Porter, won and paid $97.48 for $2, the longest price of the meeting.

Gideon raced as though much the best in the mud. He was sent very wide in going to the top as the field left the back stretch, had the outside course as they went around the turn, passed Knave of Clubs and Bright Plume and assumed the lead at the head of the stretch. He was pulling away at the close, winning easily.

Gideon's place price was $23.40 for $2 and the show price $13.74 for $2.

Poland Takes Second.

Speedwell, a 3-year-old filly from the stable of G. L. Kalbfleisch, furnished more excitement before the start of the second race than the actual running. She was led to the barrier by a stable pony, rearing and fighting all the way. At the barrier she leaped over the tape and gave Jockey L. Bazer a wild ride for half a mile. She was caught and led to the barrier.

Then the real race started and Speedwell had enough strength left to keep well up with the leaders until they reached the stretch turn. Poland, an even money favorite, was the ultimate winner, finishing several lengths in front of Marjory Seth without being hard driven. Miss Maggie was third.

Third Goes to Gale.

The third developed a surprise when Gale of the E. Rucker stable finished in front of Queen Clara and Dry Moon. Queen Clara was a 7-to-5 favorite while Sweep Net, which failed to get into the money, was quoted at 5 to 2. The field was off in perfect alignment in front of the grandstand, and Gale went to the front in the back stretch after outrunning Queen Clara.

Tommy Root, who is having more falls from the saddle recently than the Prince of Wales, added another to his record at the conclusion of the third race. After finishing third on Dry Moon, Root tried to check his horse sharply just beyond the clubhouse and Dry Moon slipped in the mud and fell. Root was unseated but was unhurt. He was mud covered from his cap to his boots when he weighed in at the judges' stand.

Azure Wins Fourth.

Jockey Peter on drew a 30-day suspension from the stewards for Root's tumble. It was also announced that ePterson had been fined $50 for a display of dissatisfaction on Friday over the calling of the horses in the fifth race.

Azure took the fourth by leading all the way and resisting the challenge of Margie K. in the stretch. Lee Hardy had to resort to the whip to keep Azure going. Spanish Star came with surprising speed in the last quarter to catch Col. Winn at the wire and finish third. Azure was a short-priced favorite.

Rain Soaks Track.

A shower which started at 10:30 this morning soaked the track and left considerable surface water in miniature puddles. This sudden change of track conditions, from dry and fast to muddy, resulted in some late scratches. Three horses were withdrawn from the first race. The rain stopped at noon but there was still a threat of showers.

Early indications were that the crowd would reach the regular Saturday average of 10,000.

Broad Axe Gains a Tainted Victory in Feature Race Event

By Dent McSkimming,
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

FAIRMOUNT RACE TRACK, Sept. 17.—Broad Axe scored what was regarded as a tainted victory in the fifth and feature race of this afternoon's program, the East St. Louis Journal handicap.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs:

Post Mistress (L. Hardy)	9.92	3.42	2.96
aButer (V. Peterson)		2.76	2.68
Twinkling (J. Bunch)			6.06

Time, 1:14 2-5. Max Brick, The Runt, Red Sublette and Word of Honor also ran.

Two factors tended to eliminate the most serious competition offered in the race, Indianapolis getting off to a very bad start when assistant starter obstructed his ..., and Good Shepherd receiving an extremely weak ride from Tommy Root.

In both cases these circumstances were plainly visible to the crowd of 10,000 and brought shouts of disapproval.

As usual, the opening race, in which the contestants were maidens—horses that have never scored a victory—provided an upset. Gideon, owned and trained by C. Porter, won and paid $97.48 for $2, the longest price of the meeting.

Gideon raced as though much at best in the mud. He was sent very wide in going to the top as the field left the back stretch, had the outside course as they went around the turn, passed Knave of Clubs and Bright Plume and assumed the lead at the head of the stretch. He was pulling away at the close, winning easily.

Poland Takes Second.

Speedwell, a 3-year-old filly from the stable of G. L. Kalbfleisch, furnished more excitement before the start of the second race than the actual running. She was led to the barrier by a stable pony, rearing and fighting all the way. At the barrier she leaped over the rope and gave Jockey L. Bazer a wild ride for half a mile. She was caught and led to the barrier. Then the real race started and Speedwell had enough strength left to keep well up with the leaders until they reached the stretch turn. Poland, an even money favorite, was the ultimate winner, finishing several lengths in front of Marjory Seth without being hard driven. Miss Maggie was third.

Third Goes to Gale.

The third developed a surprise when Gale of the E. Rucker stable finished in front of Queen Clara and Dry Moon. Queen Clara was a 6-5 favorite while Sweep Net, which failed to get into the money, was quoted at 5 to 2. The field was off in perfect alignment in front of the grandstand, and Gale went to the front in the back stretch after outrunning Queen Clara.

Tommy Root, who is having more falls from the saddle recently than the Prince of Wales, added another to his record at the conclusion of the third race. After finishing third on Dry Moon, Root tried to check his horse sharply just beyond the clubhouse and Dry Moon slipped in the mud and fell. Root was unseated but was unhurt. He was mud covered from his cap to his boots when he weighed in at the judges' stand.

Azure Wins Fourth.

Jockey Peter on drew a 30-day suspension from the stewards for Root's tumble. It was also announced that ePterson had been fined $50 for a display of dissatisfaction on Friday over the calling of the horses in the fifth race.

Azure took the fourth by leading all the way and resisting the challenge of Margie K. in the stretch. Lee Hardy had to resort to the whip to keep Azure going. Spanish Star came with surprising speed in the last quarter to catch Col. Winn at the wire and finish third. Azure was a short-priced favorite.

This sudden change of track conditions, from dry and fast to muddy, resulted in some late scratches. Three horses were withdrawn from the first race. The rain stopped at noon but there was still a threat of showers.

Early indications were that the crowd would reach the regular Saturday average of 10,000.

*Field.

Gideon, showing fine speed in the going, was kept far out in the track when racing into the lead and, taking a good advantage, held it gamely to the end. Rainstorm moved up fast on the stretch turn, swerved in sharply when a furlong out, and, outstaying Vachell, could not reach the leader. Vachell made up ground to the stretch, where he held on well. Knave of Clubs began well and had no excuses. Dancing finished fast. Bright Plume showed speed to the stretch.

Two-dollar mutuels paid: Gideon, win $97.48, place $28.40, show $13.74; Rainstorm, place $9.46, show $7.02; Vachell, show $6.20.

SECOND RACE—$1000, claiming, 3-year-olds and up, 6 furlongs—Start fair, won handily; place driving. Went to post 2:36; at post 6 minutes. Winner, b. g. 6 by Polymelian-J. May. Trainer, J. G. Brown. Time, :23 4-5; :47 4-5; 1:14. Value to winner, $700, $221, $1 14.

Poland, much the best and at home in the going, saved ground racing into lead early and after drawing clear after three furlongs was never in danger. Marjory Seth, always in closest pursuit, made a meek challenge when a furlong out but was faltering badly at end. Miss Maggie was hard ridden throughout. Kathe finished fairly well. Keeper showed nothing. Speedwell ran away a half-mile before start.

$2 mutuels paid: Poland, win $4.60, place $3.08, show $2.92; Marjory Seth, place $3.14, show $2.76; Miss Maggie, show $2.98.

Gale, lucky to get through and save much ground on the first turn, was strongly restrained while making the pace. Leisurely to the stretch, where he responded to rousing, came away fast. Queen Clara bore out badly first turn, forced the pace under steady restraint, but faltered badly when called on. Dry Moon raced close up to the stretch, where, despite tiring, he held Lord Valentine safe. Latter had no excuse. Sweep Net was forced very wide first turn and tired after a half mile.

$2 mutuels paid: Gale, win $21.88, place $7.44, show $5.28; Queen Clara, place $3.10, show $2.64; Dry Moon, show $4.38.

LACOSTE WINS U. S. NET TITLE FOR SECOND TIME

French Ace Defeats Big Bill Tilden in Straight Sets, 11—9, 6—3, 11—9.

By the Associated Press.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 17.—Rene La Coste of France today won the tennis championship of the United States for the second time in two years by defeating Bill Tilden in straight sets. The final scores were 11—9, 6—3, 11—9.

With an ace, a placement and two Lacoste outs Tilden won the lead again 8-7, but the stoical Frenchman even it on his service. Tilden then made three errors and a double fault and again was on the defensive, but a net-cord placement by Tilden and a towering smash at the net and they were deadlocked once more. By following his shots to the net, Lacoste cracked service with the aid of four placements in a long deuce game and led at 10-9. Lacoste then won his service for the set and match.

Lacoste was on the offensive from the start when Tilden's usually dependable ground strokes went all awry. After grinding out a victory in the first set, Lacoste dashed through the second in short order but a gallant Tilden made a game fight in the final set. When close to the end, Lacoste had match point twice but Tilden rallied to the net for volley placements which gave him a brief reprieve.

Tilden rushed around the net to congratulate Lacoste as he saw his final drive bite the turf inches outside the line. Lacoste for a moment lost his stolid mien and beamed as he bowed to the gallery.

The three set defeat was one of the worst Tilden has taken since he scaled the heights some eight years ago. It was more decisive than Lacoste's previous victories over him this year in France and at Germantown last week for the Davis cup.

Wearing down the American ace with his marvelous mechanical precision, LaCaste put over the finishing punch in the third set after Tilden had the set almost within his grasp. Tilden was tiring and could not withstand the youthful challenge of the French marvel in the last few telling strokes.

FIRST SET.

LaCoste served first and won the opening game on three successive Tilden nets. On his own service Tilden carried the first point as LaCoste buried a drive in the net. Big Bill found the net again, then shot over a placement, netted another, and swept the game on a pair of aces. Tilden was unsteady and LaCoste took the next game on service to lead, two games to one. The American held his service intact to even it up, two-all.

Both broke service in the fifth and sixth games, then LaCoste took his to lead, 4-3. Again Tilden evened it but the Frenchman ran through his service at love. A fighting Tilden held him off by holding his delivery. Tilden, however, was uncertain on the many shots and his errors were numerous. LaCoste drew him wide of position and scored a placement, then forced the American to drive into the net and took the lead again, 6-5.

Tilden's cannon-ball service again allowed him to draw to even terms. They took the net rarely and the match thus far was chiefly a back court driving duel. Tilden at last took the offensive by breaking through LaCoste's delivery in the thirteen game. He lost the advantage when LaCoste came up from forty love to win the fourteenth on a run of Tilden errors.

In a deuced game LaCoste outsteadied Tilden on a long exchange and had eight games to seven. The American evened it as a drive by LaCoste was outside the line by a hair. On LaCoste's service the ball

Sharkey on Hand Ready to Step in If He Is Needed

From a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.

WITHOUT betraying any confidence we feel safe in saying that there is one man in Chicago today who hopes that either Jack Dempsey or Gene Tunney will not be able to "toe the scratch" next Thursday night, as scheduled.

He is Joseph Cuckoshay, late "logical candidate" for the right to challenge for the title and better (now legally) known as Jack Sharkey.

Jack Dempsey's recent victim is an invited guest, too, and will be paid a retainer, whether he dons a glove or not.

Sharkey is hired to act as alternate, in case of any last minute injury to either Tunney or Dempsey. Sharkey would then substitute. It is certain that Sharkey would afford an interesting fight against either Dempsey or Tunney if an opportunity offered.

"I'm in fine shape and have been training for the job, even though its 100 to 1 that I won't be needed," Sharkey said.

Sharkey looked the part of a man in condition and no doubt could give an excellent account of himself.

Dempsey's High Morale Impresses Wray; Boxer Says He's in Shape Now

By John E. Wray
Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—"You will see a different fight and a different Dempsey," said Jack himself, greatest of all the sock throwers of the pugilistic ages. The writer had asked him if he felt that he was in better shape for next Thursday's battle with Tunney than he was at Philadelphia last September.

"I was weak. I couldn't think. My training had been broken up, as you know, by all sorts of trouble. I hadn't fought for four years. Honest, I couldn't even hit the canvas." And Jack grinned as he said it. "I feel that everything I am doing today is better than for several years, and if I do not win back the title, I will have no complaint. I'm satisfied that I am O K."

Dempsey received the writer on the porch of the "Million dollar"—nothing goes around the modern boxing camp unless it is couched in terms of seven figures—Lincoln Fields race track clubhouse. The interior of the apartment is fit for royalty or a race track promoter. When not used by Dempsey the quarters are occupied by Col. Matt Winn. The furnishings are such that the Crown Prince probably would want to spread a handkerchief on the love seats for fear of damaging the tapestry.

Dempsey in soiled serge trousers and old cap did not at that moment fit so well with the costly interior, hence he invited us out to the porch where things were cozier. He balanced himself on the porch rail, a picture of rugged health, brown as a coffee bean, the eye whites around his dark iris showing clear with health and virility. Dempsey's sleeves were rolled up, revealing the immense and hairy forearms, bulging with muscles, that have stood the shock of much battering in the past 10 years. Dempsey's hands looked big and rugged. His entire arm punching plant dwarfed one's recollection of the pink and white ensemble of Tunney.

Dempsey in all his life has never had trouble with those rugged maulers.

"Jack, they say they are going to watch you tape your hands, so that you don't use any foreign substance, or too many layers of wrapping to reinforce your hands, when you fight Tunney."

"That," commented Dempsey, "is just plain bunk. I'll tell you why. The taping is always done under commission supervision. In New York, Philadelphia and Illinois, so many yards of tape are allowed for each hand by law. An inspector watches it put on in the dressing room. Now how could I gain any advantage in the taping?"

Dempsey said that much of the reading matter being published about him and his preparation for the fight misrepresented the true situation just as badly as the tape incident.

"I have been getting myself in fine shape," he observed. "I feel great, honestly, Eddie. If I told some of the boys around here how good I think I am, they would think I was spoofing them. But because I do feel good and because I thought that I might overdo it by working in the tremendous hot weather around here, they have tried to make out that I'm dodging work, because my legs won't stand it. They think I'm all in.

"Why, I'm ready to go on now, I weigh about 200 pounds and it's all good stuff. I'll enter the ring around 195 pounds and it will be all good muscle and not fat. Whatever work I do for the rest of the time will be just loosening up. I really ought not to do anything but loaf and save up all my strength.

"But some of the boys are getting scared that I'm not working because I can't work. That's the way it goes. You can take it straight from me that Tunney will see something entirely new about the Dempsey that he'll not like on Sept. 22, and that's a promise."

Dempsey was asked about his legs. Reports had carried stories that his legs were through. And once the legs of an athlete are gone, the athlete himself is just a husk. It was suggested to him that stories of his fight with Sharkey called attention to his shaky props and quivering leg muscles.

"Say, those boys were right about that. My legs were shaky and probably my muscles wobbled a bit, but you know Sharkey hit me. And I never yet have trained my legs not to shake, when I'm socked on the chin.

"'Way back in 1921 Carpentier hit me on the jaw and those darn legs of mine got out of hand right away. They shook scandalous and then in 1923 Firpo got me on the chin in the first 10 seconds and those legs let me down almost to the floor. Whenever I get mushed on the chin, my legs want to quit work, although so far they never have gone on a complete strike. And they're not going to this time.

"That leg hunch is just another bum idea. Hit any athlete of any age on the chin and legs will buckle and shake. My legs are human, but they're better than most human's legs at that.

Denies He's a Has-Been.

"I'm only in the young 30s and my legs have no right to be old. Neither am I old. I'm not a has-been. Tunney may whip me, but it won't be because I'm an old man, but because he's a better one."

"How about the cuts you received in the Sharkey fight—have they healed?"

Dempsey mutely turned an unscarred forehead to view.

"They won't bother me any," he commented, "I expect they'll stop a few gloves at that." He grinned.

"Have you planned to change your fighting style against Tunney? Have you thought of any way to get to him or to bring him closer to you?"

"Nothing that I can be certain of" he answered. "I know I am faster than a year ago, that I'm hitting as hard and as snappily as I used to and that I will not walk into Tunney's left hand all the time, as I did before. I was goofy the night I fought Gene at Philadelphia. I just couldn't untrack myself. That was because of four years off the ring. I was sick, too. I am sure that I will have more than one trick in the little old bag, when I start to do my stuff."

"What about the referee, Jack—have you any especial interest in that?"

"I think the commission here will take care of that. I don't know who the officials will be. A referee can do a lot of damage if he isn't right. But I don't think they can afford to have any 'wrong' guy in on this show. It's too big. "You know at Philadelphia they handed me what was intended to be a raw deal. I won't make any charges, but this case concerns one of the law suits now threatening against Gene Tunney. If the fight had been close, it might have cost me dearly. As it was, it made no difference. A middleweight could have beaten me, that night. A referee mears a lot to a fighter when the breaks are coming and going. One little mistake may mean the decision."

Says He Didn't Foul Sharkey.

Dempsey didn't suggest it, but a case in point was furnisehd by the Sharkey-Dempsey battle, in the last round. The question of whether a foul had been committed was the turning point. A biased referee could easily have ruled in favor of Sharkey on a claim of foul.

"Did you hit Sharkey, a foul blow, Jack?" Dempsey was asked. "I think not," he answered. "at least no damaging foul. I am sure I did not hit in the grein-positive. If he raised himself upwards, he might have lowered the blow, anyway, the referee told him to keep on fighting so I finished it. Sharkey was pushing down my gloves for the last two rounds of the fight."

Jerry Luvadis, the faithful trainer who follows Dempsey throughout each day, minute by minute, like a watchful airedale, took Dempsey away at this moment. Jerry is no respector of interviewers. If it's time for Dempsey to get his run-rubbed he he is. Jerry sees to it.

The effect of the interview on the writer at least was to convince him of one thing, he particularly desired to know.

Dempsey's morale is high, because he is firmly convinced that Tunney defeated a Dempsey 50 per cent below Jack's present form.

BILL JOHNSTON IS THROUGH AS DAVIS CUP STAR

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Little Bill Johnston, an outstanding figure in American tennis for the last decade, has played his last Davis Cup match. The firely little Californian, beaten in the International series last week by both Henri Cochet and Rene Lacoste of the French team, and eliminated in the semifinals of the National Championships yesterday by Lacoste, announced his retirement last night at a dinner given aboard the liner France by the victorious French team.

With Big Bill Tilden, Johnston brought the historic Davis Cup back from Australia in 1920, and was until this year one of the two chief factors in keeping it here. Tilden and Johnston established the most powerful tennis monopoly in history. In all his Davis Cup campaigns Johnston had lost only one match until his game collapsed this year.

The announcement of Johnston's retirement was received with regret by both American and French players at the dinner. Little Bill explained that business affairs in California were occupying almost his entire time. He had little opportunity to practice, he said, and was unable to put himself into the condition required by the International matches.

Dwight F. Davis, donor of the Davis Cup, told the players he had been hoping for three years that the French would take the trophy home.

"Now we can go ahead and develope new players," he said. "Tennis is a young man's game, and we have been depending too long on our veterans. I believe it will prove a good thing for the game to have our monopoly broken."

Asked if he thought America would win back the cup next year, Davis said that depended entirely on how young players came along.

LACOSTE AGAIN WINS NET TITLE

passed over the net sixteen times and Tilden finally outgeneraled his opponent for the point, but it was the only one he scored in the game. LaCoste took an early lead in the next, and the score stood set-point against Tilden six times before he finally warded off LaCoste and won the game on volley placements.

LaCoste had far less trouble winning his service to lead, 10-9. On three Tilden outs and a net, while Bill made a single placement. LaCoste won the set at 11-9 It took forty-two minutes to play.

SECOND SET

On his momentum LaCoste coasted through the first game of the second set while Tilden got a single point, but Bill came back to take the next three games LaCoste, however, carried the next four to lead five games to three. Tilden was losing out on his back court driving game before LaCoste's machine-like steadiness. Tilden showed signs of tiring. With LaCoste serving in the final game he rallied for a volley placement but netted his next drive for the point that gave LaCoste the set, 6-3 in nineteen minutes.

THIRD SET.

With his only chance of victory hinging on winning the third set, Tilden opened up his old varied net attack, following his services and drives to the barrier with ever-increasing frequency. By these tactics he took the first game, scoring a placement and forcing LaCoste to shoot outside three times. He broke through the Frenchman's service in similar style in the next game for a 2-0 lead before LaCoste was able to take a deuced game on Tilden's delivery. Tilden added the next two and Lacoste came through on his service, games stood 4—2, with Tilden leading.

An out, an ace and two placements swung the next game to Tilden in short order, but Lacoste held him off by taking his service. Dancing about the back court, Lacoste made a beautiful get of a Tilden drive and took the first two points of the game. A drop shot placement and Lacoste errors carried Tilden to set point twice, but Lacoste took the game on an out and a placement to make it four games to Bill's five.

Fighting for a straight set victory, Lacoste brought the count to five games all on his service, getting a placement and three Tilden errors. In a swift flash of his old self, Tilden took his service at love with the help of an ace, but the effort told and Lacoste swept his own with the same ease.

Lacostes' wonderful agility enabled him to reach a Tilden side line shot which would have been a placement against most players, and on it the Frenchman broke Bill's service to lead, 7 games top. Lacoste brought it to match point, was warded off, and again had his chance as Tilden drove into the net. His shot was beyond the base line and Tilden's had a reprieve. The crowd was deathly silent through a long exchange, then broke into a shout as Tilden gained advantage on a passing shot. At last the Philadelphian took the game on a side line placement, and the throng stood to applaud him. The score stood 7-all.

MANAGER FLYNN ASSERTS HE DID NOT SHOW BEST

One More Session Tomorrow or Monday Will End Former Champion's Heavy Training for Bout.

By the Associated Press.

LINCOLN FIELDS, CRETE, Ill., Sept. 17.—The punching power and the speed of Jack Dempsey have been demonstrated for the critical sports writers in two floodlight workouts, and the former champion was about ready today to hang up his training gloves and await the gong next Thursday night.

Six rounds of heavy swinging Thursday night and three rounds last night, gave the 100 boxing experts something to write about. But Manager Flynn said the former champion did not show them any "real" fighting.

One More Heavy Workout.

One more workout tomorrow or Monday will finish Jack's preparation, Flynn said. He grumbled some about the apparent favoritism of the weatherman, who sent cooling showers to Tunney's camp at Lake Villa, and none to Dempsey's quarters, about 125 miles to the south.

The switch to night workouts, though, has been highly beneficial to Dempsey, Flynn said. He has been enabled to continue his training without risking the broiling effect of the unseasonable afternoon heat, and his eyes have become accustomed to the tricky shadows of floodlights.

Mrs. Flynn, who arrived at the camp yesterday, was greatly pleased when she was presented with a $9000 diamond bracelet, Dempsey's gift to his manager's wife. She tried it on, but soon removed it and had it taken to a safety deposit vault while she assumed command of Dempsey's kitchen. From now on all the former titleholder's food will be prepared under her direct supervision.

Is in Splendid Condition.

Jack's program today called for another day of rest, with perhaps some golf shooting from an improvised tee at the track.

Jack left his quarters yesterday only for a short stroll with Jerry Luvadis, his trainer. He intends to keep close to the track from now on to avoid curious crowds.

Dr. W. A. Lynott, Jack's physician, gave him another examination last night and reported that five minutes after his evening workout, his pulse and respiration were back to absolute normal, and that he was in splendid condition.

BLAEHOLDER LEAVES WESTERN LEAGUE WITH 29 VICTORIES

TULSA, Ok., Sept. 17.—The batting championship of the Western League for the 1927 season which closed a week ago, goes to Langford of Des Moines who poled out the only .400 mark of the season in any of the larger leagues. He scored .408 in 149 games with the Demons, making 270 safe hits. Joe Rabbit of Omaha made one more safe blow, but played in six more games, according to the final unofficial averages released today.

Adam Coromosky of Wichita, who was recalled by the Pittsburg Pirates just before the Western season closed, was second in batting honors, 10 points below Langford.

Home run honors of the circuit went to Munson of Tulsa, who made 32 circuit drives. Sturdy of the Oilers was second with 23. Pete Casey, the Oilers home run king, was incapacitated by a beanball in midseason and played only two or three games thereafter.

Joe Rabbit was by long odds the champion baserunner of the league, with 49 stolen bases to his credit. Langford was his closest competitor on the paths with 31.

The champion pitcher of the league was George Blaeholder, with 26 victories and only 9 defeats, with the heavy hitting Tulsa champions back of him. Several were higher on percentage but none close to the Oilers' mound ace in number of wins. Black of Tulsa had the highest percentage among the regulars, with a [...]een wins and but two losses.

Leading batters of the Western League, in the final unofficial averages for the season, were: Langford, Des Moines, .408; Comorosky, Wichita, .398; Bennett, Tulsa, .385; Munson, Tulsa, .383; Sturdy, Tulsa, .374; Rabbit, Omaha, .361; F. Griffin, Des Moines, .361; Wingfield, Amarillo, .354; Cunningham, Des Moines, .348; Reagan, Denver, .347.

Will Play Title Game.

Hickory Sole, International Shoe League champions will tackle Laclede-Christy, winners of the flag in the Y. M. C. A. Industrial League No. 1, this afternoon at Harlem Park at 2:30 o'clock for the Industrial Y. M. C. A. Championship. If Hickory Sole wins this afternoon's game, they will receive the trophy emblematical of the championship awarded by the St. Louis Y. M. C. A. Industrial Commission, they having defeated McQuay-Norris 6 to 2 last Saturday. If Laclede-Christy wins, they will play McQuay-Norris next Saturday for the championship.

Quite So.

Perish the thought that the boys went over to France just to get a drink but as long as they are in Paris they might as well do as the Parisians do.

The way those Giants and Cards have been dividing double headers you would think they were twins. And nobody appreciated their seeming spirit of brotherly love more than the Pirates of Pittsburg, Pa.

With Recruit Frankhouse burning up the league it is too bad Jess Haines couldn't have postponed his slump until a more favorable time if any.

And They Did.

However, the uncertainties of baseball will be served. It is felt even in the American League where it was uncertain up until the last game of the season between them whether the Browns would win a game from the Yankees.

MISSOURI SQUAD GOES THROUGH STIFF FOOTBALL WORKOUT

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Sept. 17.—Coach Gwynn Henry disregarded the torrid weather last night and whipped his Missouri Tigers through two hours of dummy scrimmage. It was the squad's second night of practice.

Henry said he must make every hour count, with the Kansas Aggie game coming on Oct. 1 and the annual battle with Nebraska's Cornhuskers scheduled the following week.

Last night's setto saw Capt. Flamank, Charlie Tuttle, Bert Clark and Scott Kennedy negotiating dummy plays, and they gave the impression of knowing their stuff. Henry plans to use the same set of plays used last spring in practice.

Tunney Tells Leonard He Will Try His Best to Gain Early Knockout in Contest

All Principals Agree That It Is Up to Commission to Keep Battle "on Square" — Righeimer Explains Rule on Fouls.

By Benny Leonard,
(Retired Lightweight Champion of the World.)
(Copyright, 1927.)

LAKEVILLE, Ill., Sept. 17.—Ever since this match was made, people have been asking me one question: "Do you think the fight will be on the level?" I decided I was going to make it my business to find out and that when I did find out I'd let my readers know.

When I saw Tunney yesterday, I put the question right up to him.

"Champ," I said, "there have been rumors about this fight being in the bag or fixed. I believe that neither you nor Dempsey would knowingly have anything to do with "faking" or anything like that, but what precautions are you taking, if any, to protect yourself against any unsatisfactory ending in this fight? What are you going to do to insure yourself and your friends that this fight will be fought strictly on the level?"

Gene looked at me with eyes wide open with amazement.

"None," he finally replied. And then he added: "I mean I'm taking no precautions other than to get myself in the best possible shape for the fight, and that I will go in there and do my best to win fairly and squarely.

"I have every confidence in the integrity and honesty of the Illinois Boxing Commission. I have every confidence in the promoters of this contest. I am placing myself in their hands, so far as protection is concerned, and I am convinced that they will discharge their duties in an honest and fair manner. So far as my part is concerned, I will do everything I possibly can to score a quick and decisive victory."

Billy Gibson said practically the same thing, as did Tex Rickard and Jack Dempsey. They all put it up to the Boxing Commission. So I went to the Commissioners.

I was received by the chairman, John Righeimer. When I told him what I wanted, he said:

"We are going to assume all responsibility for the fairness of this fight. This is our first real big bout, and we are not going to allow anything to happen to mar it. If anything does start we will nip it in the bud.

"Let's take this thing in order. Our rule on fouls, which requires the referee to consult with the judges before making a final decision, does not only obtain in the case of the referee believing a foul was committed. It also works in the case the referee should start to count out a man who, in the opinion of the commission actually has been fouled. In a case of this kind a member of the commission, who is at the ringside, would call a halt in the count and then go through the usual procedure of consulting with the judges, and if necessary a physician and a decision would be required after that."

Righeimer also said that his commission had rules concerning the taping of the hands.

There is very little betting on this fight. I find less than on any other heavyweight championship that I can remember so short a time before the contest.

Marriott Wins Bout.

By the Associated Press.

TAMPA, Fla., Sept. 17.—Bobby Marriott, Baltimore middleweight, was awarded the judges' decision over Anthony Downey of Columbus, O., at the end of their 10-round bout here last night. Willie Green Span, New York featherweight, scored a knockout over Wildcat Lulu of Tampa in the fifth round of a scheduled eight-round bout.

HEILMANN NOW IS FIVE POINTS BEHIND SIMMONS

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—The scorching heat wave has melted the batting averages of the American League leaders, reducing the chances of Harry Heilmann for capturing his fourth title. Sitting on the bench in the shade, Al Simmons watches his .391 mark stand firm, while the others slide below it one by one. Since season batting championships are rated on a basis of 100 games, Simmons may be denied the title, since he has played but in 91 games, and there are not many left.

Heilmann had a bad slump, losing 13 points this week, in figures compiled including Wednesday's games. He is now 5 points below Simmmons' .391. Among those hit by the hot weather slump was Tris Speaker, who slid out of the first 10, where he has roosted most of the season. Not so with Ty Cobb, though. The Georgia Peach climbed up to fifth place.

Cobb and Big Boy Fothergill were the only ones of the leaders to show improvement, and these two lead the second division of the batting stars, with Simmons, Heilmann and Lou Gehrig 22 points higher.

Gehrig Leads in Doubles.

Gehrig, now distanced in the home run race, is falling off in his general hitting, too. Ruth had a lead of seven on Thursday, and the Babe was only seven short of his 1921 record of 59. Gehrig has more doubles than the two-base king, George Burns of Cleveland. Lou had 50 and Burns 49, with no chance of either to break Burns' record of 64 last year.

Sweeping on like a prairie fire with the pennant safely stowed away, the Yankees' pitching staff has all the honors of the league, among the regulars. The first six places are held by Manager Huggins' mound staff. Waite Hoyt, topping the list, is tied with Ted Lyons of the White Sox in total victories won at 21.

Leading hitters of the American League: Simmons, Philadelphia, .391; Heilmann, Detroit, .386; Gehrig, New York, .380 Fothergill, Detroit, .359; Cobb, Philadelphia, .353; Combs, New York, .350; Ruth, New York, .349 Goslin, Washington, .340; Meusel, New York, .339; Schang, St. Louis, .336.

Brother Lloyd Gaining.

There is still time for the Waner brothers at Pittsburg to get together and divide up the batting honors of the National League for the season, if Brother Lloyd can keep on with his spurt to catch Brother Paul, who has been on top nearly all year. Lloyd has climbed up to third place, not so very far behind Rogers Hornsby. Paul is still 15 points ahead of Hornsby, though he dropped a few points today in averages compiled including Wednesday's games.

Close on the heels of these three is old Joe Harris, cast off by Washington last winter, who has shown a decided liking for the National League brand of pitching.

Frankie Frisch, unable to get close to the top in batting honors this season, has nailed down the base-stealing record beyond doubt. He pilfered six this week, and now has 40. While this is less than half Ty Cobb's record, it is still 11 better than Hendrick of Brooklyn, the runner-up.

Meadows Leads Pitchers.

With the Pirates back in another winning streak, Lee Meadows moved back to the top among the regular pitchers, with 18 victories to seven defeats. Larry Benton of the Giants is runner-up, with 15 and six. Charley Root of the Cubs, with 25 victories, has a good lead, his nearest rival being Jess Haines of the Cardinals with 22.

The home run lead is again temporarily in possession of Hack Wilson of the Cubs, who developed a hitting streak when the Cubs first came home for an extended stay, but soon lost it. Hack has 27, a lead of but one on Cy Williams of the Phillies.

Cut Over Tunney's Eye Reopened During Bout With Sparring Partner

Oculist, After Examination, However, Asserts That There Is Nothing to Worry About — Champion States He Feels Slow and Soggy Because of Intensive Heat.

By the Associated Press.

LAKE VILLA, Ill., Sept. 17.—Gene Tunney today was a world's champion with a black eye.

A gash cut in his right eyelid ten days ago, while working out with Church Wiggins, his chief sparring partner, was reopened yesterday by Jackie Williams, Chicago heavyweight, during the champion's final heavy drill before the championship fight. The original hurt had nearly healed, but the sharp jab from Williams' glove, started trouble all over again.

Although this happened at the start of his workout, Tunney finished six rounds of boxing. The sudden aggressiveness of Wiggins, who followed Williams in the ring, added to the damage, several left hooks landing on the injured lid. The bit of tape covering the wound was not knocked from its place, but the lid began swelling and the eye was slightly discolored when the champion called it a day.

Dr. George Musgrave, an eye specialist, was given a motorcycle escort to speed his trip from Chicago to Lake Villa for an examination of the injured eye.

No Danger of Infection.

The oculist spent half an hour with the champion, and said afterward that there was absolutely no danger of serious complication.

"It's just an old-fashioned black eye," Dr. Musgrave said, "There is no danger of infection. If Tunney cares to, he may box tomorrow without fear of injurious consequences. By Sunday there will be no trace of his present ailment. There is nothing to worry about. I washed the eye, and there is no need of further treatment from me."

Billy Gibson, Tunney's manager, said the eye specialist was called in as a precautionary measure. The doctor's examination, Gibson added, confirmed his own belief that the eye injury would in no way affect Tunney's chances against Dempsey.

Gene blamed his comparatively poor showing in yesterday's workout to the pain his eye caused him after the rounds with Williams.

"I barely could see from my right eye," Gene said. "It was just as if I had a severe case of astigmatism. My vision was distorted, I had no judgment of distance, and the pain at times was intense. However, I expect the damage will have been repaired entirely before I meet Dempsey. If it has not, I believe I can fight and whip him with only one eye."

Feels Slow and Soggy.

The champion also appeared worried about his general condition. The heat of the past few days forced him to take a three-day vacation at Lake Forest. During that time his weight jumped to 193 pounds, almost six pounds above his normal fighting weight.

"I feel slow and soggy," Gene said. "However, a good stiff session on the road probably will lighten me considerably and will bring my general condition to the 'edge' I had when I left Speculator, N. Y. My heavy work now is over. Roadwork and light exercise will complete the training program."

The feeling appeared general about the camp that Tunney is showing signs of approaching staleness, despite the many layoffs he has taken since coming West to finish training.

COUNTERFEIT TICKET PLOT FOR BIG BOUT UNCOVERED, REPORT

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—Information that on the day of the Tunney-Dempsey heavyweight championship fight, Chicago would be flooded with 10,000 counterfeit $40 ringside tickets, came to Capt. T. J. Callaghan, head of the United States Secret Service in Chicago today from the Val Farrell Detective Agency in New York.

The plot was to sell them at a $25 reduction under the pretense that there were no buyers and the alleged scalpers were eager to dispose of their wares even at a loss. The tickets were said to have been counterfeited in Pennsylvania where some arrests have been made and confessions obtained that 10,000 spurious tickets had been printed.

JUDGE DEFENDS DEFIANCE OF LAW

Illinois Supreme Justice Says Nullification Is Often Safety Valve for Republic.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—A justice of the Illinois Supreme Court, in a Constitutional day address last night told the Chicago Bar Association and the Illinois Sons of the American Revolution that nullification of law is often "the only safety valve for a self-governing people."

"Call me a rebel, if you please," said Justice Floyd E. Thompson. "It is time strong men got up on their hind legs and howled. One cannot praise a law and at the same time effect its repeal. If a law is considered bad, it must be attacked, and war cannot be made feebly.

"We honor our fathers who defied laws they regarded as oppressive, but we shout treason to those who undertake to repeal a law which expresses our pet intolerance. The traitors to our Government are not the few who criticize legislation coerced by organized groups temporarily in control, but rather the Congressmen whose vote on important measures is swayed by personal considerations, and the lobbyist or group representative whose threats of punishment or promises of reward, however veiled, are a means of influencing the Congressmen's vote.

"Those who would force tyranny upon us want to make us subjects of the nation. We are not subjects. We are the sovereign rulers of the country.

"Because a measure is adopted and put on the statute books by those who misrepresent us does not mean that we must obey. Because the people defy a law of which they do not approve, I am not alarmed into believing that the nation is crumbling and that we are headed for the scrap heap of nations. We are not lawless.

"The menace to the Constitution is not the radical communist or anarchist. It is rather the more plausible reformer who seeks to undermine our Government structure by tearing down the time-proven safeguards. The same voter who demands that his Congressman pass stringent laws for the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment threatens him if he disobeys the Constitutional mandate for reapportionment. Hundreds of statutes and ordinances are made dead letters by common consent."

SAYS HAWAIIAN AIR DEFENSE NEEDS MUCH STRENGTHENING

Chairman of House Military Committee Stresses Weakness of Canal Zone Also.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.— Material strengthening of the air defense at Hawaii and the Canal Zone is held advisable by Acting Chairman James of the House Military Committee, who has returned to the Capital after an extended inspection trip that included more than a score of posts there and in Continental United States.

He said he was convinced the present army aviation building program should be expanded by Congress to meet a situation considerably changed by the Atlantic flights of Lindbergh, Chamberlain, Byrd and others, and the spanning of the stretch between the Pacific Coast and Hawaii by both army and private planes.

Enlargement of Wheeler Field and the establishment of another field near Honolulu are considered necessary by the House member. James said the army authorities in Hawaii agreed that the most substantial and effective defense of the islands was from the air, and that his investigation convinced him that the five-year program was not sufficient to provide adequate defense for the islands.

NO TRACE OF SWINDLERS WHO OBTAINED MAN'S LIFE SAVINGS

Saloon Proprietor Paid $3000 for Supposed Privilege of Distributing $25,000.

No trace has been found of the swindlers who worked the old tin box swindle yesterday on Anthony Nelson, proprietor of a saloon at 1500 South Tenth street, obtaining his life savings of $3000.

Nelson deposited the $3000 in a tin box along with $800 put up by a slight acquaintance and a purse put in by a stranger who had said he had $25,000 to be given to a St. Louis man.

Nelson posted his money for the privilege of distributing the $25,000 supposed to be in the purse. When he got home, however, he discovered his $3000 and his acquaintance's $800 were gone, and the stranger's purse contained only three $1 bills and bundle of newspaper clippings.

WOMAN STRUCK BY BALL SUES

Asks $10,000 for Injury Suffered at Sportsman's Park.

Mrs. Sanford Smith, 52 years old, of 347 Hazel avenue, Webster Groves, yesterday filed suit in Circuit Court for $10,000 on account of injury suffered when struck by a foul ball at Sportsman's Park June 24.

The incident occurred during a game between the Cardinals and the Cincinnati ball club. Mrs. Smith, seated in the grand stand, was struck on the chest by the ball, which was fouled off the bat of Shortstop Thevenow. The St. Louis National League ball club and the American League Baseball Co., as owner of the park, are named defendants. Negligence in failing to have the grand stand properly screened is alleged.

MORE NAMES ON LIST OF TRAFFIC PAROLES

Police Continue Check of Persons Who Promised Not to Drive Autos.

The second list of persons who are under promise to Police Judge Rosecan not to drive their machines from 30 to 90 days from the date of their appearance in court on charges of traffic law violations, was sent to the districts today. The names will be published in the Daily Bulletin of the Police Department from time to time, in continuance of police efforts, which began last Tuesday, to learn if the motorists' promises are being kept.

As has been told, Judge Rosecan recently began the custom of permitting some traffic law violators to pledge themselves to refrain from driving for stated periods of time, in lieu of Workhouse sentence or fine. Should a violator of his promise be discovered driving, he would be arrested and his parole revoked, Chief of Police Gerk announced.

The names and dates when paroles began, contained in today's list, are as follows:

Sept. 13—Jerry L. Freeman, 3512 Shaw, Ford truck, license 66-989.

Sept. 13—Wilbert Cappelle, 3520 Missouri, Ford touring; license 241-304.

Sept. 14—Edgar Sutterfield, 2335 Albion, Ford roadster; license 499-332.

Sept. 14—William Cottrell, 4001 Delmar, Studebaker touring; license 497-702.

Sept. 14—Buford Hutchens, 1437 North Twenty-fourth, Ford touring; license 571-056.

Sept. 14—John W. St. Clair, 620A North Taylor, Ford truck; license 7-193.

Sept. 14—Oral Ellis, 1916 Hickory, Ford roadster.

Sept. 14—John Williams, 3220 Hickory, Chevrolet coupe; license 18-384.

Sept. 14—Corbett Turner, 4053 Westminsther, Ford coupe; license 507-849.

The parole of Vincent Radosevick, 1633 South Second street, Chevrolet touring, license No. 438-951, is to extend 90 days, the report adds, in naming him.

COOLIDGE PLEASED WITH WORK IN FLOOD AREAS, WRITER SAYS

President Discusses Mississippi Situation at Lunch With Arthur Brisbane.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Arthur Brisbane, the writer, had lunch with President Coolidge at the White House yesterday. His talk with the President, he reported later, was confined to the Mississippi flood situation, the beauty of the Black Hills and White House renovations.

Asked if the President said anything about his statement regarding 1928, Brisbane replied:

"No. Naturally not, since President Coolidge said all there was to say in his extremely well chosen 'I do not choose.' Mr. Coolidge's statement was admirably phrased in the plainest possible English. It no more needs to be interpreted than 'two times two are four.' In six words he dismissed the subject. He could run if he wanted to and could be nominated and elected; but he doesn't choose to run. That's all there is to it."

Brisbane said the President seemed most interested in the Mississippi flood situation, and was greatly pleased with "the admirable handling of the disaster by those in charge, particularly in the fact that hundreds of thousands of people were moved from their homes and returned to them."

TWO POLICEMEN FIRED FOR NEGLECT OF DUTY

J. M. Rieger and Walter Orme Found by Officer With Brew Nearby.

Patrolmen John M. Rieger and Walter Orme of the Laclede Avenue District were dismissed from the force by the Board of Police Commissioners yesterday when found guilty of unbecoming conduct and neglect of duty.

Police Lieutenant George Tabb testified that at 2:30 a. m., Aug. 13, he found them in a house at 3716 Page boulevard, and that there were 78 quarts and 29 pints of home brew in the basement.

Tabb said he found Orme in the kitchen in his shirt sleeves, his coat, hat and revolver hanging on the icebox, and on a table, Tabb said, stood a bucket that looked as if it had held beer. The Lieutenant testified he had been riding past the house and bright lights and gay noises had attracted his attention and caused his investigation.

According to the patrolmen's story, Rieger had gone to the house to see about buying an automobile and had taken along his friend, Orme, who was supposed to know something about machines. They had not seen anything to drink there, they testified, and they did not know that the man from whom Rieger was going to buy the car had once stood trial for murder. It was necessary to see the owner of the car at that early hour, they said, because he worked at night and did not get home until late. As for drink, they said they had had two bottles of beverage, each, to quench their thirsts on being relieved from duty at 11 p. m.

SLAIN PHYSICIAN'S WIDOW HIRES COUNSEL

Police Say Mrs. Lilliendahl's Story of Holdup Conflicts With Physical Facts.

HAMMONTON, N. J., Sept. 17.—Mrs. Margaret Lilliendahl was at the Hammonton Barracks of the State Police today, while police and county detectives continued their search for the revolver, which was used to kill her 65-year-old husband, Dr. A. William Lilliendahl.

Dr. Lilliendahl, a retired physician, was shot to death on a lonely road near Atsion, three and one-half miles north of here, Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Lilliendahl told authorities he was killed in defending her from two Negroes.

She was questioned several hours Thursday evening and yesterday afternoon. Frank J. Harrold, chief of Atlantic County detectives, said her statements were not coherent. A wrist watch and a ruby ring, which the woman said were taken by the Negroes, was found near the spot where her husband was slain.

Charles M. Phillips, solicitor of Hammonton, has been retained as counsel for Mrs. Lilliendahl. He visited her several times yesterday, but refused to comment other than to say that habeas corpus action would be taken, if she were not released soon.

Clarence Hodson, a cousin of Mrs. Lilliendahl's deceased father, visited the woman last night. He was accompanied by his wife and his personal counsel of New York. Harry T. Lilliendahl of New York City, a brother of the slain man, and other relatives also called at the barracks to see Mrs. Lilliendahl.

Authorities maintained that Mrs. Lilliendahl was remaining at headquarters of her own free will. S. Cameron Hinkle, assistant prosecutor of Atlantic County, was among those who questioned her. He said he would have nothing to say until he conferred with Prosecutor Repetti.

FASHION TURNS FROM THE SPORTS VOGUE TO THE CHARM OF VARIETY

Subtle Glitter of Gold Shines Through Fabrics of Wool and Silk—Season's Dresses More Studied—Coat to Match Motor Car Features Winter Wardrobe.

By JEAN CHARLES WORTH.

Paris.

One of the new jeweled gowns. This model of pale blue georgette is dusted with diamants.

Frock of beige lainage with brown leather belt and corsage of geometrical sections.

Bottle-green velvet suit with short Hussar jacket and trimmed with border of shaded gray astrakhan.

Evening gown in dark blue crepe romain. Its short bolero is cloth of gold embroidered with beads.

This green velvet evening coat has a honeycombed yoke with a diamond sewn in every square.

THE world in general may be struggling with its customary problems and difficulties, but Fashion has reached the golden age. In sports, street, afternoon and evening gowns there is the subtle glitter of gold shining through fabrics of wool or silk. This means that dresses are more studied. For some seasons past we have had too much sport. Now we shall return to the charm of variety.

The introduction of gold into woolen fabrics means the return of elegance. This is not new. It had its origin with the Arabs. Chieftians, to mark their rank, wore a burnoose of wool into which a golden thread was woven. Women will now appropriate the same idea to demonstrate their chic. Dress will show a new exclusiveness.

In the winter the most important item of a woman's wardrobe is her coat. The coat is all one sees in the street. The dress underneath does not matter. The Parisienne nearly always drives her own car. For this reason she must have comfort and warmth. We wrap her in an overcoat, with a wide flare at one side, giving ample protection to the knees. The coat is made in the same colors as the body of the car, which makes it very smart. We line it with velvet to match the frock with which it is worn. This is where simplicity steps in. You cannot drive a car in a complicated gown, so these velvet motoring models are very plain.

The coats, on the contrary, are very studied. In Paris every art is influenced by other arts and by the topics of the day. This year we have been celebrating the centenary of the Romantic movement in literature. This fact has made itself felt in dressmaking. Some of the new coats of which I am speaking are made with wide, square-cut lapels over a double-breasted fastening like those worn by De Musset and his contemporaries.

Can Trousers Be Feminine?

Another important garment for winter wear is the cape. I have made a number of these cozy wraps in heavy woolen fabrics, also in the colors chosen by most smart women for their cars. These can be slipped over the shoulders with either a suit or a gown. Their line is attractive and very feminine, and I anticipate great success for them.

In spite of our new feminine treatment of clothes, there is still a strong masculine influence. Women feel they have power when they lead men's lives, and they like to wear clothes that are like men's. This makes it possible that trouser skirts may become fashionable. They are certainly on the verge of that. I cannot yet say whether they will be adopted, but in fashion nothing is impossible. To show my appreciation of this fact, I have made a number of indoor "suits"—that is to say, jackets—on the lines of men's dinner jackets, but in the softest and most feminine silks and velvets, worn with full trouser skirts cut off short between knee and ankle.

Some women will wear these in place of the tea gown. If they like them, it is possible they will ask for something on the same lines to be worn in the street. Although these are frankly trouser skirts, they are cut even fuller than the Oxford trousers with which men amused Europe a year ago. Their aspect is very feminine. Some of them are of pleated satin. When women find they can wear trouser skirts without losing one iota of their feminine charms, they may be attracted by their practical aspect. Of this I shall have more to say, perhaps, in a few months' time.

Again, we have masculine influence in the suits that are made for morning wear in the streets. Men do not like to walk about in long, cumbersome overcoats. Neither do women. The smart suit this winter will often have a short hip-length Hussar jacket that is bordered with fur. This is as practical as it is becoming, and I have no doubt it will become extremely popular. It is one of the results of the cardigan jacket fashion, which came in with the sports mode and which has been so much worn on every possible occasion.

The Sport Suit's Place

The real sports suit, consisting of jumper, pleated skirt and little jersey jacket, no longer has any standing in the haute couture of Paris. It has been relegated to the place to which it belongs. I shall still show a few models of this nature to be worn in such resorts as Cannes, Deauville and Biarritz, for which they are eminently suitable. On the whole, however, I consider the jumper suit to be now a garment that can be well obtained in shops that sell ready-made clothes. Its interpretation is too easy. The great designers are turning their attention to more important clothes.

You will want to know about the new season's silhouette. It has subtle changes, giving new lines and proportions. The waistline is being raised, which gives new apparent length to the skirt. We already had a suggestion of a higher waistline last season. Now it is the skirt that holds the place of first importance. In some cases it is actually longer and fuller. Long transparent overskirts cover a straight, narrow foundation. There are pleats and flowing panels. Godets and side drapery appear in most of the day dresses. Many of them have scalloped hems. Irregularity of the hemline is one of the chief characteristics of the coming mode. Side fullness predominates in daytime coats as well as frocks.

Another important item is the bolero. It is worn separately over the corsage this season and gives additional flare to the silhouette. In many cases it is very short, accentuating the higher waistline and emphasizing the new looseness and fullness that gives such supple freedom to the waist. To be in keeping with this high-waisted bolero, belts and sashes are swathed tightly round the hips, for looseness in one part of a dress must be balanced by fitting in another.

Having discussed the silhouette, I will tell you about colors. In the main, these are subdued, especially in the daytime, but the gold glittering through of which I have spoken above, gives them a certain richness. For the daytime, gray, blue and black are the most important. I am also using a deep red that looks extremely attractive when mixed with what I call the "Worth" blue. This combination of coloring is used for some of the motoring models. For the evening, black predominates. What could be smarter for women of any age? There is also a pale, smoky, pearl-gray, some delicate blues, and various pale, flesh tints besides a good deal of white.

Day and Evening Fabrics

Materials are richer than ever before. For the morning, tweeds and English woolen fabrics are always smart. I have a very chic ensemble which, though very feminine in aspect, is made of the gray striped material used for men's trousers. Here is masculine influence with a vengeance! The Rodier and Meyer blue woolens with a discreet gold thread are very much used.

For the afternoon, I am using velvets printed in small, discreet designs, voiles and chiffons with a velvet pattern, silks with metal trimmings, and other silks as pale and delicate in color and as fragile as Venetian glass.

For the evening, black velvet is the foundation of the collection. Its richness and elegance make it an admirable medium for the new silhouette. There is also a great deal of chiffon, crepe romain and tulle embroidered in brilliants used in black and all pastel tints for models that show a strong Egyptian and Oriental influence.

I must tell you what we have done to bring novelty into evening gowns. The new silhouette is changed only in length. There is no additional width. This would be out of keeping with the modern woman's life. As she must be slim by day, she would not at present consent to any bouffant effects in a crowded ballroom. The novelty in evening dress is the trimming of gowns with jewels and with real metal. There is even a fabric made by Coudurier out of pure gold. He tells me he is willing to take back any dress of which this forms a part and melt it down to extract gold worth several thousands of francs! This will give you a hint of its cost!

The Jeweled Trimming

Some of my new evening gowns are of crepe, studdded with sapphires or coral, each separate stone being surrounded by tiny diamonds. There are flowers, roses and gardenias made of the finest French paste set in silver, each forming an authentic jewel to replace the chiffon flowers that have now become banal. A white chiffon gown is scattered with sprays of jeweled flowers in emerald and diamonds. One in plum-colored velvet has shoulder straps that look like the finest jewels of emeralds, diamonds and onyx. Then again, there is a black satin gown with tubes of real copper edging, silk braid fringe and more copper and diamonds at the waistline. Flowers made of jewels in different colors are encrusted onto materials of every kind.

All this gives a richness to evening gowns reminiscent of Oriental and medieval Russian splendor. Here we have the mode at its most feminine.

What I have spoken of above refers to dress for the coming winter. At some future date all kinds of changes are possible. Perhaps the new raised waistline will induce women to wear corsets once more. They may think otherwise, but in fashion it is only necessary for the very chic few to adopt a new fashion and the others will all follow suit in a short space of time.

What Makes New Fashion?

We now think additional width entirely out of keeping with present-day conditions. But incidents introduce fashions. Some time hence women may be flying their own airplanes as they now drive their cars. A pretty woman may fall from her machine; her safety parachute fastened around her waist, will open as she falls. On alighting she will powder her nose, glance at her mirror, find the spreading parachute becoming, and walk with it to the nearest house. People coming to meet her may say: "How chic, how charming, you look!" And this may give us the crinoline again. Who knows?

Fashion is in a constant state of evolution. Each season we try to improve on ideas that have gone before and at the same time introduce new ones. The eye has to be accustomed gradually to extreme novelty. A dress gains an entirely different character when seen under different aspects. I see a model that is brought to my studio from the workrooms. Here I correct any defects that may exist. I get another impression of the same gown when I see the mannequin walk along the corridors to the showrooms, and yet another when she reaches the showrooms with all their brilliant light. This is what women must bear in mind when ordering their gowns. They must use imagination and try to visualize the environment in which each dress will be worn. It is thus they will avoid disappointment when their gowns are sent home.

MAKING HOME MORE HOMEY

By Wanda Barton.

ONE of the big steps in home-making is the proper placing of furniture. No matter whether the rooms are large or small the best points in them must be emphasized by the proper placing of the furniture. Centralized comfort spots in the room help make it homey. We do not have to depend upon an extravagant outlay as much as placing the few well-chosen things to the best advantage.

If the room has an open fireplace this is a good spot to start. Place a comfortable chair at either side with perhaps a tea table in the corner against the chimney breast. At the other side place an attractive floor lamp that will throw a light at just the right angle over the back of the other chair so one may read before the fire, and before both chairs footstools complete the suggestion of comfort. Footstools by the way are very much in evidence in modern rooms again.

Where the piano, or maybe the victrola, stands make it a music center by arranging the chairs attractively, a small table beside the record cabinet for great comfort in making selections. A low chair and table should be in front of the book cases. Magazines on the table and good lighting make this an attractive center. A desk in a corner, or between windows, should have its own special chair, scrap basket, good lights, and a comfortable chair to slip into while reading mail.

In one dining-room seen recently there was what at first glance looked like a very lovely high boy of old-fashioned make, but which proved to be a built-in closet used for the table linens, a copy of an old high boy and an excellent one. The owner said she had copied it from one in the museum.

When buying furniture, buy with these cozy spots in mind. Look over the house and draw a rough idea of what you would like. Don't buy at random, and above all things, do not buy too much. Rooms filled with things don't mean anything but confusion, a lot of work and expense and an ugly room.

French Girls Go to Farm School

Several agricultural schools for boys exist, however, besides a number of experimental farms.

The girls are taught gardening, dairying, the care of poultry and pigs. They are trained in domestic economy by operating the dormitory and the dining room.

Each girl is required to bring to the school her own garden hat and a pair of sabots, or wooden shoes.

Children's Bedtime Story

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

Farmer Brown's Boy Is Awakened

He sat up in bed with a start

You'll never know how great is care
'Til you misplace a little Bear.
—Farmer Brown's Boy.

WHERE was Cubby, the mischievous little Bear? Farmer Brown wished that he knew. Mother Brown wished that she knew, and most of all Farmer Brown's Boy wished that he knew. He had disappeared just as completely as if he had vanished in thin air. They had heard him racing around upstairs, and by the time they got up there no Bear was to be found; nor could they find any place for a Bear to escape. It was unbelievable, but it was so.

And such a mess as there was in that always neat house of Mother Brown's! Everywhere he had walked he had left stickiness. Everything he had touched was sticky. The bedclothes in two rooms were a sight. There was stickiness all over the carpets, and down in the cellar was such a mess as Mother Brown could not think of without quite losing her temper. And it was all because of one little Bear. Do you wonder that they wanted to find Cubby?

Until a late hour that night all three were busy with soap and water, cleaning up, so far as they could; though, as Mother Brown said, she would probably find stickiness for months to come. And all the time they worked they tried to think of where that little Bear had gone. It seemed to them that he must have gotten out of the house somehow, but how they hadn't the slightest idea.

"I won't sleep a wink," declared Mother Brown. "Of course he must have gotten out of the house; but if he did, how did he do it? If he didn't, where is he? I have a feeling right down in my bones that that imp of mischief is somewhere in this house this very minute, and I don't dare think of what he may do or get into next. Son, I wish you'd left him in the Green Forest where he belongs. A house is no place for a Bear."

Farmer Brown suddenly put down his pail of water and began to laugh. He laughed and he laughed and he laughed. Farmer Brown's Boy joined him. And by and by even Mother Brown smiled somewhat ruefully. You see, it really was funny that one small animal could get into so much mischief in so short a time and then manage to escape punishment.

It was late when they went to bed. Farmer Brown's Boy dropped off to sleep almost as soon as his head touched the pillow. It was very still there in the farmhouse. How long he had slept Farmer Brown's Boy didn't know, but he had a feeling that he had been asleep some time, when his eyes flew wide open and he sat up in bed with a start. He had heard a noise and he was certain that that noise was under his bed. He held his breath and listened. There it was again. Could there be a burglar under his bed?

Farmer Brown's Boy jumped out of bed and lighted the lamp. Then he peered under the bed. He was just in time to see a black foot disappear. It was drawn up between the slats of his bed. Farmer Brown's Boy put the lamp down on the floor and crawled under the bed where he could look up. A pair of small eyes twinkled down at him somewhat anxiously. Cubby was up on the slats of that bed, in between the springs, the last place in the world that any one would naturally think to look for him. This accounted for the mysterious way in which he had disappeared.

Minnehaha Cake.

Make the cake as already directed, then divide it into three portions. To one portion add a small cupful of chopped raisins and nuts, a teaspoonful of mixed cinnamon and cloves, a little nutmeg and vanilla flavoring. To the second portion add enough coloring to make it a delicate green and add a tablespoonful of chopped pistachio nuts. To the third portion add vanilla flavoring and a tablespoonful of blanched chopped almonds. When baked place the green layer at the bottom, the dark one in the center and the white one on top, and put together with the following filling: A cupful of sugar, three-quarters of a cupful of water boiled together for five minutes then turned onto the beaten white of an egg, beat until mixed, then add a cupful of the fruit, and as soon as cool lay up the cake.

LAUGHING AROUND THE WORLD

with IRVIN S. COBB

From a Land of Truthfulness.

BACK in 1811 there occurred the historic earthquake, which in West Tennessee and extending over into southwest Kentucky, left an extensive depression in the terrestrial crust. This depression speedily filled with water. It has since been known as Reelfoot Lake. It is the largest lake south of Mason and Dixon's Line. It is famous for its fishing and its hunting but there are shallow places filled with brush where no desirable fish are to be found.

Beginning soon after its creation, a colony of men settled about Reelfoot, taking possession of the water and its banks under the usage of squatter sovereignty. Their titles were for long disputed but never were formally extinguished until recently, when the State of Tennessee took possession of the whole territory lying below the State line and made a preserve of it.

The original squatters made their livings by hunting, trapping and fishing and by acting as guides to visiting sportsmen. Their descendants follow the same occupation. They are a clannish breed. When a stranger appears who happens to be so thrifty that he decides to save the expense of a guide he is looked upon with disfavor by the natives and usually is decoyed to a part of the lake where game is scarcest.

On one occasion came such an individual, bringing all the accoutrements of the modern angler, viz.: rods, lures, nets. He also brought along a hunting dog. In accordance with the custom, one of the natives was assigned to the task of seeing that this gentleman was escorted to a neighborhood where he would be sure to fail in his quest for fish. His dog accompanied him. After a fruitless day of bait-casting, the visitor began tossing sticks into the water for his dog to retrieve. The perfidious Reelfooter who had brought him hither presently sauntered up. At his heels was a nondescript cur answering to the name of Peruna.

"Nice dog you've got thar, Mister," said he casually.

"Yes, sir, a remarkably fine dog—blue-blooded and with a pedigree."

"Well, my purp ain't got nary one of them things but he's a purty good purp as purps go in these parts. Nothin' fancy but equal to the run of purps hereabouts. Take fish, now. How's your dog on ketchin' fish?"

"This is a bird dog—he never bothers with fish. In fact, I never heard of a dog that did."

"That so? Well, Peruna was raised different. What would you give now for a nice fresh bass?"

"Almost any amount in reason."

"Well, fifteen cents is about whut we regard as a fair price fur a fair-sized bass. Got fifteen cents on you?"

"The unbelieving Northerner decided to humor this maniac. He felt in his pockets.

"I haven't any small change with me," he said. "But here's half a dollar."

"That'll do. Lemme have it a minute." The native addressed his pet. "Come here, Peruny!" He slipped the coin into the brute's mouth and motioned to the lake. Without an instant's hesitation the intelligent animal dived in. He remained under for so long that the visitor feared he had drowned; but the owner appeared not in the least disturbed.

Eventually Peruna rose to the surface, holding between his dripping jaws a two-pound black bass. He crawled ashore, deposited his flapping catch at his master's feet and spat out thirty-five cents in nickles and dimes.

At least that is the account of the incident that was given to me by one of the most truthful citizens of West Tennessee, which is a district renowned for the truthfulness of its people.

MAKING HOME MORE HOMEY

ONE of the big steps in home-making is the proper placing of furniture. No matter whether the rooms are large or small the best points in them must be emphasized by the proper placing of the furniture. Centralizing comfort spots in the room helps make it homey. We do not have to depend upon an extravagant outlay as much as placing the few well-chosen things to the best advantage.

If the room has an open fireplace this is a good spot to start. Place a comfortable chair at either side with perhaps a tea table in the corner against the chimney breast. At the other side place an attractive floor lamp that will throw a light at just the right angle over he back of the other chair so one may read before the fire, and before both chairs footstools complete the suggestion of comfort. Footstools by the way are very much in evidence in modern rooms again.

Where the piano, or maybe the victrola, stands make it a music center by arranging the chairs attractively, a small table beside the record cabinet for great comfort in making selections. A low chair and table should be in front of the book cases. Magazines on the table and good lighting make this an attractive center. A desk in a corner, or between windows, should have its own special chair, scrap basket, good lights, and a comfortable chair to slip into while reading mail.

In one dining-room seen recently there was what at first glance looked like a very lovely high boy of old-fashioned make, but which proved to be a built-in closet used for the table linens, a copy of an old high boy and an excellent one. The owner said she had copied it from one in the museum.

When buying furniture, buy with these cozy spots in mind. Look over the house and draw a rough idea of what you would like. Don't buy at random, and above all things, do not buy too much. Rooms filled with things don't mean anything but confusion, a lot of work and expense and an ugly room.

French Girls Go to Farm School

PARIS—Sixty farmer's daughters in France are studying the business of farming in the only special agricultural school established by the Government in Brittany.

Several agricultural schools for boys exist, however, besides a number of experimental farms.

The girls are taught gardening, dairying, the care of poultry and pigs. They are trained in domestic economy by operating the dormitory and the dining room.

Each girl is required to bring to the school her own garden hat and a pair of sabots, or wooden shoes.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Markham has his friend Vance, wealthy idler and art connoisseur, accompany him to the scene of Alvin Benson's murder. Benson has been shot through the head while reading in a chair.

NOW BEGIN THE STORY.

CHAPTER IV.

At first Vance had looked over the room incuriously and watched the proceedings with bland apathy; but during Heath's brief questioning of his subordinates, an expression of cynical amusement had appeared on his face. Following a few general queries to Assistant District Attorney Dinwiddie, he had sauntered, with apparent aimlessness, about the room, looking at the various articles and occasionally shifting his gaze back and forth between different pieces of furniture. At length he had stooped down and inspected the mark made by the bullet on the wainscot; and once he had gone to the door and looked up and down the hall.

The only thing that had seemed to hold his attention to any extent was the body itself. He had stood before it for several minutes, studying its position, and had even bent over the outstretched arm on the table as if to see just how the dead man's hand was holding the book. The crossed position of the legs, however, had attracted him most, and he had stood studying them for a considerable time. Finally, he had returned his monocle to his waistcoat pocket, and joined Dinwiddie and me near the door, where he had stood, watching Heath and the other detectives with lazy indifference, until the departure of Capt. Hagedorn.

The four of us had no more than taken seats when the patrolman stationed in the vestibule appeared at the door.

"There's a man from the local precinct station here, sir," he announced, "who wants to see the officer in charge. Shall I send him in?"

Heath nodded curtly, and a moment later a large red-faced Irishman, in civilian clothes, stood before us. He saluted Heath, but on recognizing the District Attorney, made Markham the recipient of his report.

"I'm Officer McLaughlin, sir—West Forty-seventh Street Station," he informed us; "and I was on duty on this beat last night. Around midnight, I guess it was, there was a big gray Cadillac standing in front of this house—I noticed it particular, because it had a lot of fishing-tackle sticking out the back, and all of its lights were on. When I heard of the crime this morning I reported the ... to the station Sergeant, and he sent me around to tell you about it."

"Excellent," Markham commented; and then, with a nod, referred the matter to Heath.

"May be something in it," the latter admited dubiously. "How long would you say the car was here, officer?"

"A good half hour, any way. It was here before 12, and when I came back at 12:30 or thereabouts it was still here. But the next time I came by, it was gone."

"You saw nothing else? Nobody in the car, or anyone hanging around who might have been the owner?"

"No, sir, I did not."

Several other questions of a similar nature were asked him; but nothing more could be learned, and he was dismissed.

"Anyway," remarked Heath, "the car story will be good stuff to hand the reporters."

Vance had sat through the questioning of McLaughlin with drowsy inattention. I doubt if he even heard more than the first few words of the officer's report—and now, with a stifled yawn, he rose and, sauntering to the center table, picked up one of the cigarette butts that had been found in the fireplace. After rolling it between his thumb and forefinger and scrutinizing the tip, he ripped the paper open with his thumb-nail and held the exposed tobacco to his nose.

Heath, who had been watching him gloweringly, leaned suddenly forward in his chair.

"What are you doing there?" he demanded in a tone of surly truculence.

Vance lifted his eyes in decorous astonishment.

"Merely smelling of the tobacco," he replied, with condescending unconcern. "It's rather mild, y' know, but delicately blended."

The muscles in Heath's cheeks worked angrily. "Well, you'd better put it down, sir," he advised. Then he looked Vance up and down. "Tobacco expert?" he asked, with ill disguised sarcasm.

"Oh, dear, no." Vance's voice was dulcet. "My specialty is scarab-cartouches of the Ptolemaic dynasties."

Markham interposed diplomatically.

"You really shouldn't touch anything around here, Vance, at this stage of the game. You never know what'll turn out to be important. Those cigarette stubs may quite possibly be significant evidence."

"Evidence?" repeated Vance sweetly. "My word! You don't say, really! Most amusin'!"

Markham was plainly annoyed; and Heath was boiling inwardly, but made no further comment; he even forced a mirthless smile. He evidently felt that he had been a little too abrupt with this friend of the District Attorney's, however much the friend might have deserved being reprimanded.

Heath, however, was no sycophant in the presence of his superiors. He knew his worth and lived up to it with his whole energy, discharging the tasks to which he was assigned with a dogged indifference to his own political well-being. This stubbornness of spirit, and the solidity of character as implied, were respected and valued by the men over him.

He was a large, powerful man, but agile and graceful in his movements, like a highly trained boxer. He had hard, blue eyes, remarkably bright and penetrating, a small nose, a broad oval chin, and a stern straight mouth with lips that appeared always compressed. His hair, which, though he was well along in his forties, was without a trace of grayness, was cropped about the edges, and stood upright in a short bristly pompadour. His voice had an aggressive resonance, but he rarely blustered. In many ways he accorded with the conventional notion of what a detective is like. But there was something more to the man's personality, an added capability and strength, as it were; and as I sat watching him that morning I felt myself unconsciously admiring him, despite his very obvious limitations.

"What's the exact situation, Sergeant?" Markham asked. "Dinwiddie gave me only the barest facts."

Heath cleared his throat.

"We got the word a little before seven. Benson's housekeeper, a Mrs. Platz, called upon the local station and reported that she'd found him dead, and asked that somebody be sent over at once. The message, of course, was relayed to headquarters. I wasn't there at the time, but Burke and Emery were on duty, and after notifying Inspector Moran, they came on up here. Several of the men from the local station were already on the job doing the usual nosing about. When the inspector had got here and looked the situation over he telephoned me to hurry along. When I arrived the local men had gone, and three more men from the homicide bureau had joined Burke and Emery. The inspector also 'phoned Capt. Hagedorn — he thought the case big enough to call him in on it at once—and the Captain had just got here when you arrived. Mr. Dinwiddie had come in right after the inspector, and 'phoned you at once. Chief Inspector O'Brien came along a little ahead of me. I questioned the Platz woman right off; and my men were looking the place over when you showed up."

"Where's this Mrs. Platz now?" asked Markham.

"Upstairs being watched by one of the local men. She lives in the house."

"Why did you mention the specific hour of 12:30 to the doctor?"

"Platz told me she heard a report at that time, which I thought might have been the shot. I guess now it was the shot—it checks up with a number of things."

"I think we'd better have another talk with Mrs. Platz," Markham suggested. "But first: did you find anything suggestive in the room here—anything to go on?"

Heath hesitated almost imperceptibly; then he drew from his coat pocket a woman's handbag and a pair of long white kid gloves and tossed them on the table in front of the District Attorney.

"Only these," he said. "One of the local men found them on the end of the mantel over there."

The Greatest Story in the World—By Kor

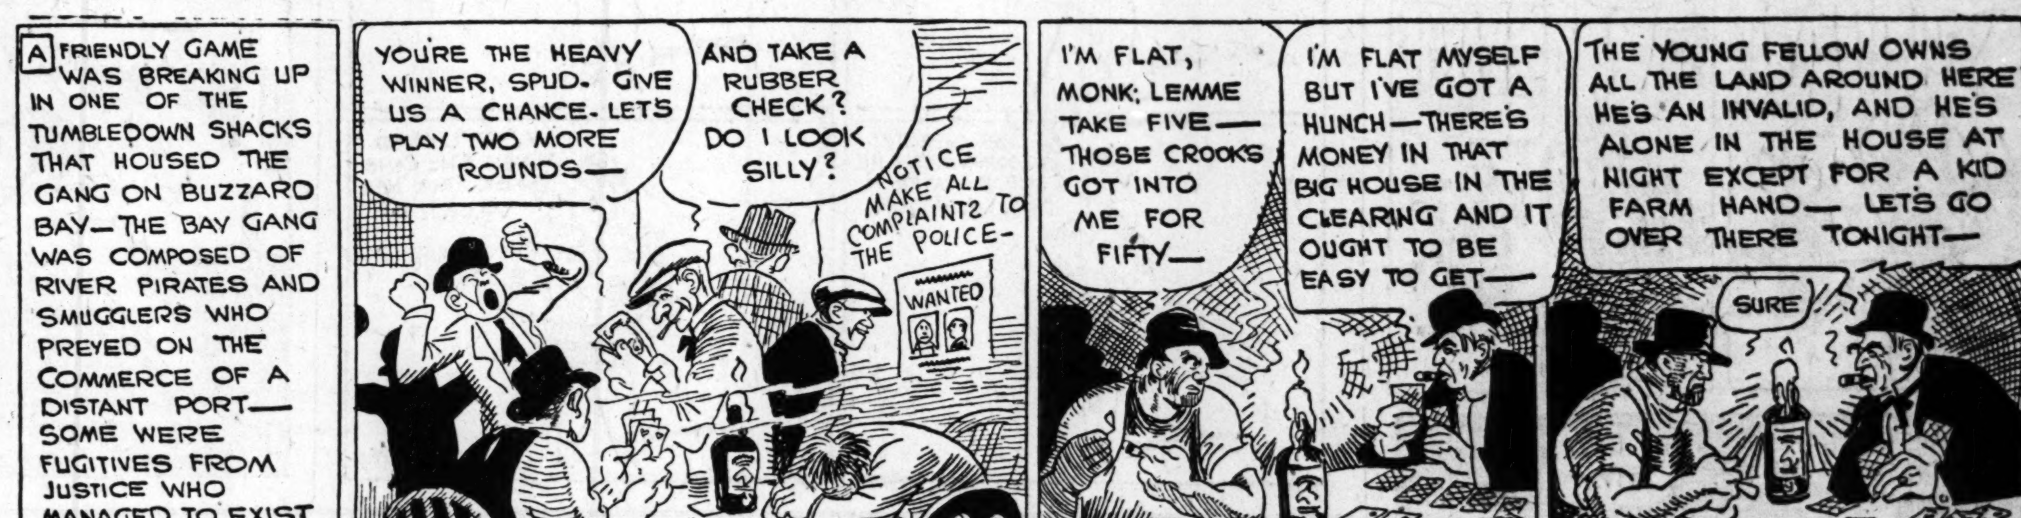

The Bible in Pictures

And the house of Israel called the name thereof Manna: and it was like coriander seed, white; and the taste of it was like wafers made with honey. And Moses said, This is the thing which the Lord commandeth, Fill an omer of it to be kept for your generations; that they may see the bread wherewith I have fed you in the wilderness, when I brought you forth from the land of Egypt. And Moses said unto Aaron, Take a pot, and put an omer full of manna therein, and lay it up before the Lord, to be kept for your generations. As the Lord commanded Moses, so Aaron laid it up before the Testimony, to be kept. And the children of Israel did eat manna forty years, until they came to a land inhabited; they did eat manna, until they came unto the borders of the land of Canaan. Now an omer is the tenth part of an ephah.

8,000 AMERICANS NOW IN PARIS FOR LEGION SESSIONS

Cold Rain on Last Day of Mobilization for Convention Recalls Chill Days of 10 Years Ago.

WAR LEADERS PAY TRIBUTES TO DEAD

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 17. — Armistice weather—that cold, penetrating, blinding rain—closed in on the American Legion today.

The Legionnaires arriving at Paris on this, the last day of peace-time mobilization for their pious pilgrimage, found that it chilled them just a bit did 10 years ago in the trenches and as they went over the top in that fateful forest. Three thousand Legionnaires arrived after having landed from the steamship Tuscania, Coronia and Aquitaine at Havre, and the steamship Republic at Cherbourg.

Cold rain pelted down upon Marshal Foch, Gen. John J. Pershing and National Commander Howard P. Savage as they paid homage to the American war dead at Suresnes Cemetery.

22,000 Men, 6000 Women.

But the gang is all here and the rain has neither dampened the enthusiasm of the delegates nor chilled the warmth of the French welcome. Twenty-two thousand men and 6000 women forming the delegations of the American Legion and its Auxiliary now are here for their respective conventions which open Monday.

The big charge up Montmartre Hill began this evening before the cabarets were opened and there were long line-ups at places Legionnaires remembered from former days here.

Cafes were rushed all evening and every tired business man's show in town played to standing room only. All the cinemas were filled and many of them showed the film of the big victory parade that followed the Armistice, with captions in English and French.

The Legionnaires made the staid old French people stare, but finally smile as groups, with caps at all angles, marched along singing war songs, shouting poor French and having a general good time.

The ceremony at Suresnes Cemetery was the most important function today. There Command-er Savage, speaking directly to the dead, rather than to the living audience, said that the Legion had kept the faith which the dead comrades had entrusted to it.

Tributes to American Dead.

Marshal Foch, in a strikingly brief address, said of the American war dead:

"On the day they saw the justice, liberty and peace of the world menaced by violence and might nothing could stop them. They took up their arms."

"No soldier would wish a sweeter resting place than in the field of glory where he fell," Gen. Pershing said. The people of two nations watch over him in ceaseless solicitude and to each he becomes a symbol of mutual gratitude."

Pershing, Savage and Marshal Foch made the only addresses, with French military and civil leaders present. The ceremonies were presided over by Sheldon Whitehouse, American Charge d'Affaires. Those attending included Gen. W. Harts, military attache; Gen. Milton Foreman, Gens. Debeny and Gouraud, Col. T. Bentley Mott, Prefect Bowju of the Seine Department, and Capt. l'Hopital, aid to Marshal Foch.

Chaplain Dubell, former chaplain in the 114th Infantry, pronounced the benediction and Hubert Bove of the Paris Post of the American Legion, high on the hill made above the cemetery, sounded taps.

Never before has Paris been so profusely decorated since the armistice celebration or the Victory Parade on July 14, 1919. The enthusiasm of the French people as a whole is really genuine. The only discordant note comes from the communist publications, but they are much less violent in tone than a few weeks ago at the height of the Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration.
